Waldorf Case Up

Circuit court Thursday was the scene of T. E. Waldorf's case against the city of Salem. Waldorf is endeavoring to inhibit the city from paying for the services of Stevens & Koon, engineers, in making a general survey and inventory of the Salem Water & Power company. Waldorf questions the legality of transferring street improvement funds to the general fund to meet the payment. One of his chief charges is that the city has no definite proposal to buy the plant, and hence is not warranted in paying for the survey. Carl Pope and Bert Macy were attorneys for Waldorf, and City Attorney Fred Williams represented the city.

MONUMENT URGED FOR INDIAN GUIDE

Bill Would Recognize Services of Squaw Who Aided Lewis and Clark

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(By Associated Press).—A monument to Sacajawea, or The Bird, an Indian woman who contributed materially to the success of the Lewis and Clark expedition to Oregon, is proposed in a resolution favorably reported today by the senate Indians committee.

The monument, to cost $5,000, would be erected at Fort Washakie, Wyo., where Sacajawea died at the age of 100 years and where she lived for many years.

She was unpopular with the Indians because she aided in bringing the white people into the Indian country. As Sacajawea's story was unfolded today by Senator Kendrick, democrat, Wyoming, author of the resolution, she was living on the Missouri river with her French husband when the Lewis and Clark expedition reached that waterway.

She went along with the expedition as an interpreter and was able to induce the Indians to sell horses to the whites, thus enabling the expedition to get across the Rocky mountains. "She probably is the most famous Indian woman in the annals of history because of the high service which she rendered," Senator Kendrick said.
