Son's Birthday Is Marked By Dead Father's Letter

"Your Mother Is Now Your Daddy," Writes Father Whose Letters Will Be Delivered on Every Birthday Until Boy Is Married

VINELAND, N. J., April 2.—(By Associated Press.)—Despite the death of his father two days ago, 5-year old John S. Stevenson, Jr., will have the guidance of that parent during every year until he reaches maturity. It became known today with the discovery of an unusual plan evolved by Mr. Stevenson, several months before his death.

The father, 36, a University of Pennsylvania graduate and veteran of the World War, died while undergoing an operation. Among his papers were letters written to his son, counselling him in the way he should go, with instructions to have one letter delivered each September on the son's birthday. The letters were prepared for the respective ages at which they should be received by the boy.

Mr. Stevenson confided to friends he believed he had only a short time to live. The first of the letters, opened today, was dated three months ago. It read: "Dearest boy of mine: Your mother is now your daddy as well as your mother. Daddy has been taken away to see Sissy Ann; some day you will come to see both of us. Daddy is proud of his Dickie boy, and knows that he will be good to his mother and take care of her always.

"Each year, until you are big, you will get a letter from your daddy Dick on your birthday, and then you will get your last letter when you are married. A big kiss and goodbye."

The central character is the compelling plot to Florence Vidor who, with her four-year-old daughter, is en route to Africa in search of her missing husband.

A Spring Tonic in Green Vegetables

Do you remember when you were a child, usually about the first of March your mother started giving you sulphur and molasses; or perhaps before or after each meal a good dose of medicine containing iron? In those days most people thought it necessary to stock their medicine cabinets with patent remedies to be used as spring tonics or blood purifiers.

Since with the years, we are growing a bit wiser, many are beginning to discard the so-called tonics in bottles and we are making good use of our every day vegetables, onions, celery, lettuce, turnips, carrots, spinach, etc. Vegetables and greens are so rich in mineral salts and most of them can be obtained throughout the year.

With a varied menu containing these vegetables it will not be necessary to consult your druggist or doctor each spring, for all that is really necessary is the addition of a few more greens in your diet.

Of course, if you eat nothing but bread, meat and potatoes every day during the winter months, most any of us would feel the need of a change in diet, whether it be obtained from a bottle or from a garden.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that all the iron needed for the blood may be obtained through the generous use of green vegetables, but don't wait until spring to begin using them. You cannot crowd into a few weeks or a month the foods which should be eaten regularly all winter.

For the Invalid Tray While your patient is seriously, possibly dangerously ill, meals and medicine are alike monotonous but when convalescence commences and the patient once more begins to take an interest in life, it should be a pleasure as well as a duty for one preparing the invalid's tray to keep the menu or dishes served on the tray from becoming uninteresting.

Meal time is looked forward to eagerly during these long days. With the morning paper and the doctor's visit, it is about the only bright spot in the slow passing day, unless one can have visitors or read books.

You can see how a clean tray carefully set with shining glass and silver and with attractive china and appetizing food nicely garnished will produce an appetite, when the patient previously didn't think he was hungry. Do have hot—the things that should be hot and cold things cold, but occasionally it is a good idea to just change it around and instead of serving a hot broth, have it cold and jellied and perhaps serve some fruit jelly in a little basket made out of an orange or grape fruit shell and if salad dressing is served use a lemon cut and scalloped to form a small container.

It is not easy to balance a heavy tray on one's lap while propped up in bed, as perhaps you know if you've tried it. If you are fortunate enough to have an especially made bedside table which extends over the bed, the base resting on the floor, then you need not worry. There are also short-legged stools or tables which stand over one's lap, and which are far more useful as not to slide easily. A boy could make one and enjoy the work, or your local carpenter could quickly build one at little expense.

No matter what you are cooking or serving, vary it. Serve the food on colorful dishes, stand the custard cup on paper or lace doilies, use your nicest silver and china for the salad or main dish, and above all, do not place the oldest, most unattractive salt and pepper on the tray. A flower or a joke, a favor, a puzzle or something not expected, will act as a surprise and make one forget for a moment being uncomfortable or convalescent.

INFANT MORTALITY LOW FACTS SHOW

Dr. Walter H. Brown Declares Percentage Can Be Decreased

There were 853 births in Marion county last year, according to a report submitted Thursday by Dr. Walter H. Brown, head of the Marion county child health demonstration and county health officer. Of this number but 48 died showing an infant mortality for Marion county of 5.63 deaths per 1000 births. Infant mortality average for the United States is 72.2.

Dr. Brown estimated that one half of the deaths following birth can be accounted for by prenatal defects, which are undoubtedly preventable. Nine of the 48 deaths were caused by premature birth. Six died of injuries received at birth.

During the year there were 533 in this county. The greatest factor was heart's disease, accounting for 79 deaths. Hardening of the arteries, ending in apoplexy, resulted in 48 deaths. Tuberculosis claimed 21. Suicide claimed 6 victims, while accidental crushings accounted for 15.

BEAUTIFUL CLOTHES FEATURE OF PICTURE

Peggy Hopkins Joyce Wears Wonderful Gowns in "The Skyrocket," Here

If you want to see beautiful clothes, worn by a woman who knows how to wear them, by all means see Peggy Hopkins Joyce in "The Skyrocket," the current attraction at the Hellig theater today.

After viewing this master-production, which by the way was directed by Marshall Neilan, we have discovered the answer to the popular question: "What is the lure of Peggy Joyce." The answer as we see it is that regardless of what might be said about Miss Joyce, there can be no doubt that she is every inch a woman, and therein lies the charm, or rather the lure.

There is no question that if they continue to give her such vehicles as she has in "The Skyrocket" she will become one of screenland's leading personages. She has everything that goes to making an artist of the first caliber. Her poise is nothing short of marvelous, her beauty unquestioned, and above all else she really can act. Her performance is surprisingly good. This is Miss Joyce's screen debut, and Mr. Neilan with the years of experience he has behind him was wise enough not to attempt the picture without insuring himself against failure. He surrounded her with a production and supporting cast that is second to none of any production released this year.

WHOLESALE DRUG FIRM OPENS HERE

Indicative of the growth of Salem as a jobbing center comes the announcement of the incorporation of the Daniel J. Fry Drug company, with headquarters here, to do a wholesale drug business throughout western Oregon, from Portland to Ashland, with Daniel J. Fry Jr., Orris J. Fry and A. S. Hussey as the incorporators.

The new company has a capital stock of $150,000 and will be equipped to fill all of the general needs of the 400 drug stores in the territory, supplying most of them with much faster service than can be secured out of Portland. The new firm will be in full operation in about three weeks, it is estimated, and plans to have at least five salesmen on the road.

Repeated requests from retail druggists of the valley and southern Oregon for establishment of a jobbing house at Salem where their needs could be promptly served is chiefly responsible for organization of the company, it was announced.
