

Salem Senators Ready To Swing Against Fulton Club Here On Sunday

ALTER LOCAL NINE TO TIGHTEN HOLES

Baird on First, Proctor on Second, Bishop on Third Is Combination

Salem Senators will face the Fulton club of Portland Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in their third Greater Portland-Willamette Valley league game. Oxford park will be the scene of the mix.

Senators will have on the field a team that will be stronger than at any time previous in the season. "Wild Bill" Baird has been signed for first base. Proctor will be switched from third back to his old position at second, and Biddy Bishop, who has been playing first, will go to third. With Red Riddings at shortstop, the Senators should have one of the strongest infields in the league.

Frisko Edwards will be back on the receiving end of Salem's battery. It was largely through his head work that Salem made the strong showing she did last year. He has been missed by the team in the first two games. Burton will be relief pitcher, but because of his hitting ability, will take the outfield when Edwards is behind the bat.

Barham and Russell will furnish the artillery. Barham will probably start, as Fulton is considered dangerous. Fulton defeated Albany in its first game of the season, but lost last Sunday to the Portland Cyclops. Salem lost to the same team.

Low Simmons, manager of the Fulton boys, has sent word to Manager Bishop that the victory will be taken back to Portland, if his club has anything to say about it.

Says American Poetry Takes High Rank Through World

CHICAGO.—American poetry today is of greater worth than that being produced anywhere in the world, and for the past 15 years American poets have been the most vital force in the art.

This is the opinion of Miss Harriett Monroe, editor and founder of the monthly magazine, "Poetry" who believes that the tremendous strides of this country toward world leadership in industry and political affairs have brought a natural cultural growth that is reflected in the vigor and freshness of its poets.

In 1812, when she began her campaign for the magazine which was to be the organ of poets, she was fearful of her reception. From Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, novelist and historian, she received the idea of the financial scheme which made her magazine possible. He suggested that she get a hundred or more persons to contribute $50 a year for five years, to be used in relieving what he termed the "desperate situation of contemporary poetry in America," and headed the list of contributors.

Old Clock Repaired With Funds Provided by Golfers

LONDON.—Claimed to be the oldest working time piece in England, the famous old clock of Rye parish church has been repaired by the generosity of golfers all over the world.

One of the finest golf courses in England is at Rye, and many Americans who have played there answered an appeal for funds to restore the old timepiece. It was erected in 1515, the total cost of material and labor being two pounds, fifteen shillings and four pence. The pendulum, which may be seen swinging within the church, is 20 feet long. Cannon balls are used for weights.

Argentine Ant Waging War on Domestic Pest

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—A race war is raging in California and state authorities, far from trying to pacify the combatants, are adding to the slaughter by endeavoring to poison them all—namely, dark-brown Argentine ants and their redskin opponents, the Fire ants.

Fifteen years ago entomologists predicted the energetic ant eventually would crowd out all other breeds and become sole survivor of the ant race in this state. Late bulletins from the front indicate that while the prophecy has not fully materialized the South American insect has most of his rivals on the run.

Higher Taxi Fares to Greet American Tourists in France PARIS.—Taxi-drivers, known to tourists as one of the cheapest pleasures of Paris, will cost more for American visitors this summer.

Day rates, pending the installation of new meters on the cabs, have been increased by one franc and night rates will be double the present meter-readings. Chauffeurs agitated for months to get the new scale of tariffs arranged, using increased prices they had to pay for tires and gasoline as their principal argument.

As a compensation for the passenger, the police have received orders to prevent chauffeurs from bargaining or charging excessive fares late at night, which has been a scandalous abuse in Montmartre where cabarets and night-clubs do not close until four and five o'clock in the morning.

TO ADVERTISE ROAD BED, April 23.—(By Associated Press.)—With the idea of advertising The Dallas-California highway, a party of The Dallas business men arrived in Bend today and will leave early in the morning for Klamath Falls, the southern terminus of the highway.

Glad They're On Babe Ruth's Team

Wonder if we can do anything with these big league bats," two Yankee rookies are asking each other as they look at Babe Ruth's club, and Garland Braxton, who joined the Yanks late last season.

Sports Editor of Central Press ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 17.—I took the opportunity here to visit Hughie Jennings, veteran baseball leader and former manager of the Detroit Tigers. Jennings has been ill here and the baseball world has been interested in his condition.

Baseball writers and other correspondents have made many conjectures as to his condition, the nature of his illness, et cetera. I visited him in person for three reasons:

Because of my respect for him as a baseball man. Because of my personal friendship for him. And to learn the exact truth about his illness.

Jennings is not near death. He is not confined to his bed. He is not prohibited from seeing callers. The famous old member of the Baltimore Orioles is taking a complete rest under ideal conditions for a lung infection which must be arrested before he can assume active work in any field. This condition was determined seven weeks ago. He has already gained weight (with the resultant return of vitality), and, barring a slight cough, does not appear ill.

He has the old love of battle in his eyes when he talks of conquest on the ball field and only a slight flush of his cheeks betrays the fact that he is not the Jennings of old, physically.

He divides his waking hours between reading the doings of the sport world, answering personal correspondence, taking long afternoon naps on his sleeping porch, and brief auto trips through the Carolina hills, which are absolutely gorgeous at this time.

The return of Jennings to McGraw's side as chief aide drew fresh attention to the greatness of Hughie as a teacher—the teacher who taught Cobb, if you will.

So that visit to the hospital then was to be the reunion of teacher and pupil?

Far from that.

It turned out to be, as it should have been, the reunion of two men who gave the best years of their lives working together to make baseball what it is today—Jennings carrying through the years the spirit of faithfulness, loyalty and "fight" on which the game was founded; Cobb, by his very dash, brilliancy and dynamic force, revolutionizing the game.

And, oh, what a talkfest they had, just Ty and Hughie, who had labored shoulder to shoulder on the field and off with one end in view—to better baseball.

Of course Jennings' first interest was in the Tigers and Cobb ran through a brief snoop of the team and its prospects, Jennings interposing now and then with points regarding the other clubs, which I had just left farther south.

And then baseball in general. And through this talk ran a plea on Jennings' part to keep in the game the old spirit of competition.

No definition there between pupil and master, I want to make it clear, UNLESS—

In that handclasp at our arrival and departure Cobb tried to express, in a big man's way, the appreciation he holds for the man who "let him grow up" to be the greatest of all ball players—the superman of supermen.

Only Jennings and Cobb know about that.
