NERGO LAD, 12, CONFESSES CRIME

Inches of water to go swimming. The Simonian boy was with him and went wading. To negro removed his clothing, and was splashing about in the water. He said he accidentally splashed water on George, and the latter, angered, splashed water on him. Overpowering the younger boy, he "ducked" him.

The officers were puzzled at how a seven year old boy could be drowned in only 20 inches of water, and questioned Kellogg for several hours. Repeatedly he told them that he had been working when suddenly he heard Simonian call for his mother.

At the coroner's inquest this afternoon Kellogg told his tale of having found the boy in the water and as a result the jury returned a verdict of accidental drowning. Immediately after the verdict, Campbell and Ford started a seige of questioning, which lasted for more than three hours ending when the negro boy broke down and confessed to the drowning.

By Norman E. Brown. Two important moves affecting the game of baseball were made by the baseball powers over the past winter months.

One was the action of the combined rules committee of the big leagues in voting in favor of the open use of resin by pitchers for drying their hands.

The other was a change in the scoring rules, under which a batter receives credit for a sacrifice fly and is not charged with a time at bat if his fly advances a man from first to second or second to third, as well as from third home.

The four representatives of the National League on the committee voted for the use of the resin. The four American League representatives voted against it.

Minor changes in the rules include the extension of time between double-headers from 10 to 15 minutes; charging of the pitcher with an error when he makes a wild pitch on the third strike; forcing the batter to complete the circuit of the bases if he wishes to be credited with a winning home run in the last half of the ninth, and increasing the home run distance into the grandstand from 235 to 250 feet.

What effect will the early victories of the champion Washington Senators have on the ultimate result of the 1926 pennant race? This query may well be raised.

The first game of the year between the two was a heart-breaker for the beaten team, the Athletics. Through 15 innings of world's series baseball that called upon the mental and physical resources of every man jack of both teams the best they carried the edge. The best they had in pitching—Walter Johnson—turned back the best man the Mackmen could present.

The champs had pounded Slim Harris, elongated artist of the Macks and a star of the staff, out of the box in four innings.

Plenty in this to break the faith of the Mackmen, shatter their confidence though it was bolstered to a high pitch by the spring work.

OF THE SEASON ENDS WITH WASHINGTON ATOP THE WORLD, and the Mackmen again forced to content themselves with honors going to a two-three club, Connie Mack may well feel that his chances went glimmering in that very first series—when the backbone of his machine was cracked by the masterful play of the champs.
