Heights service shall be continued as a matter for the county and not rallway, declared that the service will be maintained, both because it pays and because the public service commission requires them to make the run. The one big objection offered to the crowding out of the street cars and the installing of the buses was that the company will not have to maintain the road beds for the buses as it does for the street car road beds. Under the franchise, the company is required to pay for the paving of the street between its tracks. Also, it must pay for its share in the construction or repair of all bridges which its rails cross. The contention was made at the meeting that if the rails are accept bonds unless they are tech. construction or repair. It was also held that the company would no Directors will consider the longer be required to maintain its buses is inevitable.

Another objection was voiced that the buses will have to pay an annual license fee of only $25 while the street cars are paying $50. To this, the answer was offered that there will be more buses than street cars, so that the difference in revenue derived from fees will hardly be discernible. Residents of the Fairgrounds

Road district declared that they were not particularly interested on the retention of the street cars or in the paving of the street, but they did want assurance that the street would not be vacated. The alderman present ventured the opinion that such vacating would surely not be ordered by the couneff if it met with opposition of the residents.
