

Salem Twilight League Goes Into Action Monday Legion vs Valley

ARBITRATION WILL SETTLE DISPUTES

Group Named to Control Play in One of Two Amateur League Skeds

Salem's twilight league players go into action Monday afternoon when the American Legion nine lines up against the Valley Motor team at Oxford park, play to start at 6:15 o'clock.

Jones and Mason will work as officials during the game. The Legion nine won the championship last year, but is declared to be weaker than at the end of the former season.

A nominal admission price of 10 cents will be charged to defray expenses of officials, grounds etc.

The Industrial and Commercial League goes into action on Tuesday when DeMolay plays Company B in the opener.

A board of arbitration, to play the part of Judge Landis in organized professional ball, has been named to settle all questions that may arise.

The following rules have been established to cover this league: No Senators shall be allowed to play on any of the teams.

Members of teams shall be confined to employees, members of lodges and military companies.

No college men will be allowed to play during their summer vacation.

SALEM SENATORS TO PLAY ALBANY

Game Will Be Called at 2:30 O'Clock, Rides for Fans Requested

Salem Senators will cross bats with their old rivals, Albany, at Albany, in the fourth game of the Greater Portland-Willamette Valley league.

Two games have been won, and one lost, leaving the percentage standing at .667.

With Baird again on the team, having returned from California, hopes are higher than usual, and the winning streak is expected to be continued.

Quinn of Toledo was also signed up for the Senators. He will not be used in the game if French, Albany southpaw, is in the box.

Barham is expected to start for the locals.

Any one having room for a player or two is requested to stop at 270 North High.

They plan on leaving between 11 and 11:30. A large delegation of Salem fans plan to attend the game, which starts at 2:30 o'clock.

MAGAZINE EDITOR ADVISES WRITERS

"Be Sure You Have Ability, Then Work Hard," Says Post Critic

George Horace Lorimer, famous editor of the Saturday Evening Post and the hope of thousands of strugglers after literary fame, gives as his formula for budding writers in the current International Book Review, to learn life by contact and by reading, to learn to think, and then start writing.

Newspaper work is the best training, Mr. Lorimer believes.

"Learning to write is more difficult, perhaps, than learning other professions," Mr. Lorimer says, "because it is a lonely process. The thing most young writers fail to realize is that they must serve an apprenticeship."

"To be a doctor or a lawyer one must also serve an apprenticeship because it is laid out along prescribed lines. The young student of medicine must have years of training at school. Then he becomes an interne and finally starts out to build up a practise for himself—which is a long, arduous proceeding."

"The same thing is true, in a way, of the young writer, except that no one can teach him to write. He must teach himself. Of course he can take one or more of the many excellent training courses

There may be years of discouragement and endeavor, which do not seem to lead him anywhere; and the thing he does not realize is that these painful years are the period of apprenticeship—the time when he is learning the lessons he will have to know before he can write.

"So, my advice to the young writer is this: Serve your apprenticeship, knowing it for what it is. Learn all you can about life, about men and women, about history and the affairs of the world, about literature and the conflict of ideas.

"Learn to think. Make yourself a master of words. Develop your individual style. Then, when you are ready, if you have anything to say, you will find your market."

Mr. Lorimer confesses in the interview that he bought coal with the money from the first story he wrote. Asked how he happened to write it, he answers that he needed the coal.
