"Red Dice" Is Filled With Thrilling Situations; Closes Tonight

How would you enjoy watching a pair of "bones" shoot tumbling, twisting, turning out of a dice box, if you were aware that the digits upon which they eventually stopped were to decree the day upon which you were doomed to die?

It is in just such a situation that Rod LaRocque finds himself in "Red Dice," his current star vehicle which is the big feature at the Oregon theatre.

Broke, dejected, down and out, Rod bargains with North, the czar of a powerful bootlegging ring, to take his own life within a year in return for the immediate payment to him of $300. North, played by Gustave von Seyffertitz, in turn insures Rod's life for $100,000. He then requires that Rod marry a girl of North's selection and that he live with her for a time to allay insurance company suspicion.

North lets a pair of dice decree the exact date upon which Rod is to die. The death day set, the suicide candidate marries the girl, played by Marguerite De La Motte, a girl whom he has never seen prior to the marriage.

Contrary to Rod's wildest expectations and also to the well-laid plans of North, Rod falls in love with his wife, and decides he's not so keen on going through with the suicide agreement. Rod's desperate struggle to raise $100,000 within the year that he may buy back his life, which he has sold to North, and which North is sure to demand, furnishes thrill after thrill, including the hijacking of a rum ship at sea, and other tense situations galore.

WOMEN SUPPORT DRY CANDIDATES

Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs Declare Wets Get No Aid

LA GRANDE, Ore., May 4.—(By Associated Press.)—The Oregon Federation of Women's clubs in annual convention here today went on record to support only candidates who favor prohibition and law enforcement. The adoption of resolutions and an address by Dr. E. C. Holland, president of Washington State college featured today's session of the convention.

The delegates adopted resolutions favoring a state tubercular hospital in eastern Oregon, urging promotion of a state campaign for protection of native plants, approving the state highway commission for acquiring parks, endorsing the proposed fine arts building at the University of Oregon reaffirming a stand for kindergarten extension and supporting the Spanish-American war veterans' project to establish a bronze statue on the Roosevelt highway terminal at the Pacific ocean. The chief speaker at tonight's session was President A. H. Upham of the University of Idaho, who delivered an address on "personal convictions out of Europe."

Chief interest of the delegates is gradually centering on the election of officers to be held Thursday. The two women most often mentioned as presidential possibilities are Miss Grace Chamberlain of Ashland and Mrs. G. L. Frankel of Portland. Miss Chamberlain stated today she had decided to withdraw from possible candidacy, but her friends intimated she will reconsider her decision.

KIMBALL MOVE VOTED AT TRUSTEE MEETING

doubtful status of the university church extensions on the campus of the University of Washington at Seattle provided no certain quarters for Kimball school.
Dr. E. C. Hickman, president of Kimball school argued in favor of moving the institution to Seattle, predicting that if the change were made the school would experience a rapid growth.

Present at the meeting were deputation from the faculty, alumni and student body of Kimball, president Hickman and trustees, including Dr. Edward Laird Mills, editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate, Portland; Dr. J. Ralph Magee, of Seattle; Dr. D. H. Leach, superintendent of the Salem district, Salem; Dr. A. L. Howarth, superintendent of the Portland district, Portland; Dr. D. D. Fields, pastor at Grants Pass; Ronald Glover, Salem; Charles W. Gill, Portland, D. E. Degraff and others.

Tonight's meeting was the climax of the controversy that has been in progress for several months over the proposal to move the school. Some time ago the trustees adopted a resolution favoring the proposed change. The last week it was learned from authoritative sources that the wisdom of the move was doubted by some of those interested.

At the same time rumors were current that President Hickman was considering tendering his resignation. Dr. Hickman at that time refused to confirm or deny the reports that the school would not be moved and declined to comment on the rumors concerning his resignation. Today's meeting which lasted from three o'clock this afternoon until seven tonight at times grew acrimonious as the opposing factions argued for their contentions.

"Frankly I am not in accord with President Hickman's maneuvering to take Kimball away from Salem," said Ronald Glover, lay member trustee of the school, "and I am going to do all I can to retain the institution in Salem."

Dr. Oliver, vice president of Willamette, derided the claim that Washington university was a better college of connection for Kimball than Willamette. He challenged the Seattle exponents to name more than three Methodist ministers educated at Washington while pointing to the large number of Willamette graduates in ministerial callings.

Dr. Oliver declared that Kimball's function was to train men for the pulpit and that the growth and prestige desired by President Hickman, unless it attained this object, was futile.

Among the proposals informally considered at the meeting were: Removal of the school to Seattle as per the original resolution formerly adopted by the board; the resignation of President Hickman and retention of the school at Salem; the temporary closing of the school. The only resolution officially considered was the one affirming the board's previous action, and expressing the trustee's hope that Bishop Shepard would consult with them about the whole proceedings upon his return.

attention when a stage driver noticed him perched on the running board of his machine after he had pulled out of Jefferson. The dog retained his position with his ears blowing in the wind, until the stage reached Salem. He then disappeared for a while, on a reconnaissance of the city.

He returned in a few hours and since then has been leisurely inspecting the stages, evidently trying to decide which one he should choose for the next leg of his sight-seeing journey.

Reports from the stage terminal indicate that he is having a very enjoyable time planning on what machine he should take.
