POISON CAUSE OF DEATH
MYSTERIOUS POWDER FATAL
TO LORD CARNARVON

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—(By Associated Press)—The death of Lord Carnarvon, famed Egyptologist, long unsolved, has been traced directly to a poison coating on the casket of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, Dr. Frederick H. Cowles, noted Egyptologist and fellow of the Royal Geographic society of Great Britain, said upon his arrival here from the Far East on the steamer President Wilson. The death of a number of other excavators at King Tut's tomb has been definitely traced to the same source, Dr. Cowles said. He is on his way to Seattle for a visit.

"What the poison was has not been determined," he said. "It's composition, like the gold furniture and engineering of the Egyptians, far surpasses anything in modern civilization." The poison coating of the casket crumbled into dust with the years but apparently did not lose any of its potency. Inhalation of this dust was fatal to Lord Carnarvon and several laborers and had caused the acute illness of Howard Carter and others who continued the excavations.

BERNICE FRANCES WILLIAMS PASSES

Belonged to Pioneer Oregon Families; Born in Salem, Studied Here

In San Diego, Cal., on Monday, June 14, 1926, at 1:40 p. m., Bernice Frances, eldest daughter of the late Walter P. and Ella Royal Williams, and wife of Lieut. John C. Wemple, U. S. M. C., passed away after a long illness. She was born in Salem, Oregon, but the greater part of her life was spent in the east, where she was educated, attending the public schools in Washington, D. C., Belvidere seminary, Belvidere, N. J., for four years, a short time in Peace Institute in Raleigh, N. C., and a year in Willamette university in Salem. Her earliest attendance was in the kindergarten and primary school conducted by Miss Ballou in Salem.

She attained distinction as a writer of short stories under the pen name of "Bernice Frances," many of her writings appearing in current magazines. Life held great promise for the future, and her going has left a void that none other can fill.

She was laid to rest in Mount Hope cemetery on Saturday, June 18th, interment being strictly private. The funeral services held in the chapel Friday were conducted by Rev. Ward of the Episcopal church, being attended by intimate friends and officials of the marine corps.

Beside the bereaved husband, she is survived by her mother, and only sister, Mrs. Merle Hersey of New York, and a little niece, Dorothy Hersey, with a host of relatives in Oregon, the families of both her father and mother having been among the early pioneers of the state. Amidst the beautiful flowers of California, our little white rose fell asleep peacefully smiling as she passed to her rest. (Portland papers please copy.) Mrs. W. P. Williams, the mother.

WHEELER AND REED MEET ACROSS TABLE

expenditures, during the past six years. Mr. Wheeler placed the receipts for last year roughly at between $150,000 and $200,000. Frankly stating that the league made a fight in both the primaries and the general elections for the selection of legislators favorable to its cause, and conceded that it took a hand in prohibition prosecutions.

Senator Reed insisted on calling this "interference" with the action of the courts, but the dry leader took vigorous exception declaring that what the league did was to gather the facts and present them to the prosecuting officers with such suggestions as it thought warranted.

Where the dry officials thought a federal agent was being "framed" the district attorneys were so informed, the witness said, but where the evidence indicated that such an officer had "gone wrong" the league was anxious for prosecution.

Explaining that he was transferred to Washington eight years ago from Ohio, Mr. Wheeler said his work as legislative superintendent in addition to that of general counsel encompassed the effort to have enacted legislation favorable to the prohibition cause and to defeat wet bills.
