Dietetics and Home Economics Afford Subject for Valuable Lecture Course

Extremely instructive, was the second lecture in a series of five which Prof. George E. Parker gave from 2 to 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the new Commercial club room before a group of interested women. Professor Parker opened this valuable course, which is free to all who are interested, on Wednesday afternoon. Both this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon similar lectures will be given. However, the main drawing card promises to be the special lecture at 7:30 o'clock tonight which has been especially arranged for those who have missed, or must miss, the afternoon sessions.

Professor Parker illustrated his lecture by means of charts, an exhibit of canned fruits, and an actual demonstration of canning processes.

Special stress was placed on the proper combination of foods, letting the proteins represent 15 per cent; the fats 25 per cent, and the carbohydrates 60 per cent.

Professor Parker distributed charts, grouping foods according to their classes and relative food values.

In speaking of corpulency, the three main causes were listed as follows: Too much food; too much sleep, and the improper functioning of the ductless glands.

The calories was defined in a clear manner as the heat unit representing the amount of heat which is necessary to raise one pound of water four degrees Fahrenheit.

Professor Parker gave as a true fact in the estimation of correct weight the standard of 110 pounds to the first five feet, with 5 1/2 pounds for every inch over.
