ACTION OF OREGON PICTURE THRILLING

"The Still Alarm" Now Playing Here, Is Ultimate in the Melodrama

A gap of eighteen years was bridged in a week at Universal City during the making of "The Still Alarm," the Universal-Jewel which is now playing at the Oregon theatre.

And nothing more unusual than a little grease paint and regulation make-up powder accomplished the seemingly impossible lapse.

Overnight, Edna Marian, the ingenue of the cast, changed from a child in arms to a winsome young girl of eighteen.

William Russell, the valiant fireman of the piece, became a white-haired, middle-aged man instead of his youthful self, and Helene Chadwick shifted from a young bride to a beautiful sophisticated woman of the world.

The necessity for these minor miracles was due to the sequence in which scenes for "The Still Alarm" were made. Edward Laemmle and the production manager decreed that a series of scenes in the opening of the picture should be filmed, and then decided to leap through a lapse of eighteen years.

The supporting cast of "The Still Alarm" includes Richard Travers, Edward Hearn, John T. Murray, Dot Farley, Jacques L'Auray and others. The story was adapted from the famous stage melodrama by the same name.

WATER RIGHT CASE SETTLED BY LUPER

Adjudication on Deschutes River Ended by Engineer's Ruling

Adjudication of water rights on the Deschutes river, started in 1922, was culminated Monday when State Engineer Rhea Luper filed his order of determination.

The Deschutes river is one of the largest streams in central Oregon subject to development on a large scale. The adjudication proceedings affected 175 claims.

Among the more important rights involved in the settlement were those of the Central Oregon Irrigation district with 47,000 acres, Jefferson water conservancy district with 100,000 acres, south unit improvement district with 18,000 acres and the west side reclamation district with 20,000 acres.

Power claims involved include those of the Bend Water, Light & Power company, Giese Falls Power company, Odell Falls Land company, Columbia-Deschutes Power company, Deschutes Falls Power company, Columbia Valley Power company, Malcolm A. Moody and the Pringle Falls Electric Power & Water company.

The state engineer's order of determination in general limits the diversion of water to the rate of one second foot to 40 acres with a limitation at the diversion point of five acre feet per acre per annum where the canal losses are estimated at 40 per cent of the quantity.

The natural flow of the Deschutes river is sufficient to supply all rights prior to 1907 but rights of that date and subsequent thereto will be subject to water shortage in a part of the irrigation season unless supplemented by storage. Luper explained in commenting on his order: "With the construction of storage works, thousands of acres of additional land can be reclaimed on the upper part of the stream and the lower part is considered as offering the best opportunity for the development of power of any large stream in the state."

White and green is always a popular color scheme for bridal tables. This can be carried out nicely with white roses, lilies of the valley, white sweet peas and other white flowers in bloom at

'26 PEACH CROP FORECAST HEAVY

Prospects Good in Practically Every State, Report Declares

The largest peach crop in years is forecast by the United States department of agriculture. Peach production is increasing in Georgia, the Carolinas, Illinois and California, the report states, as a result of heavy planting in recent years. The large crop in the country as a whole is due to good crops in practically every important peach state, however.

From experience and tests made it has been proven that one-half level teaspoon of Calumet baking powder prevents the falling, and it is not necessary to serve the soufflé as soon as it comes from the oven. A more satisfactory soufflé is made using a white sauce foundation, in this case the stiffly beaten egg whites and folded in the sauce when it has cooled. If added to the sauce and cooked, much of the baking powder gas would be lost, since the retarding ingredient in Calumet baking powder begins to act when heat is applied.

COOKING YOUR SUMMER VEGETABLES

Within a few weeks our summer vegetables will be in their prime. Even now most all of them are on the market. Those of you who have gardens of your own, of course, have the advantage of the rest of us, since vegetables are so much better used soon after gathering than after the garden.

Many vegetables are disliked by certain members of your family; so the greatest skill in cookery is necessary to make the average family eat all of them.

One general rule for conserving both the flavor and food value is to bake or steam them instead of boiling, or if they have to be boiled to cook in a small amount of water, whole or in their skins rather than cutting in pieces.

The French are much more scientific in their methods of cooking fresh vegetables than we Americans ever hope to be. For instance they cook them in a very small amount of water and sometimes no water at all. They add a little sugar to the water or juice in which the vegetables are cooked, to give a fresh sweetish taste. They also blanch all their delicate green vegetables before cooking.

Those to be boiled should be plunged immediately into boiling salted water. Strong flavored vegetables such as cabbage, onions, cauliflower, turnips and brussels sprouts should be boiled rapidly in an uncovered vessel. Mild-flavored ones as beans and peas should be simmered in a small quantity of water as will cook them. The cover should be slightly ajar, since all vegetables require some ventilation during cooking.

Asparagus is a vegetable of very delicate flavor and should be cooked carefully. It should be crisp, yet tender. The best way to serve asparagus is with a cream, Hollandaise or drawn butter sauce.

To be real good, fresh peas must be cooked as soon as possible after gathering from the vine. The flavor is so delicate that they must be cooked in just enough water to prevent burning. Fresh peas cook from 5 to 20 minutes. Never be guilty of draining off the liquid, but let it evaporate, then season with salt, pepper and a generous supply of butter, or a rich cream sauce may be added, according to the individual taste.

Another vegetable on the market at this time is the string bean. Like peas they should be cooked immediately after picking. In selecting string-beans choose only those which are crisp and tender rather than those that are tough and withered.
