GLAD TO BE BACK IN HIS OLD HOME

He Kept From Feeling Too Lonesome by Eating Loganberries

Prof. F. A. English was a Salem boy. He is the son of F. A. English, 2680 Cherry avenue. He graduated from Salem high school with the class of 1911, and from Oregon Agricultural college in 1917.

He then went to the agricultural and mechanical college of Texas, at College Station in that state, not far from Houston, where he was an assistant professor for three years.

Professor English began to feel at home after he crossed the Rockies coming west, and he felt still more that way after passing the Cascades. He feels very much at home here, though he sees many changes and improvements in Salem and the surrounding country.

He was pleased to be able to get an excellent brand of logan-berry pie on his way out, on the diner of the Milwaukee railroad.
