July 1, 1926 THE BEST TEACHING—"These words, which I command thee, shall be in thine heart: And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Deut. 6:6, 7.

IF HE SAID IT, HE SHOULD RESIGN

Dr. A. B. Hall, president-elect of the University of Oregon, is credited in yesterday's dispatches as saying: "Prohibition is the great national scandal in the history of the country."

If he said that, he should resign— And if he has not the good sense to resign he should be discharged.

He is reported in the same Associated Press Dispatch as being a "staunch advocate of state and local prohibition," but opposed to national prohibition in principle as an item of "monotonous standardization."

He could as consistently be opposed to the Emancipation Proclamation on the same principle—

Allowing the states that favored it to maintain human slavery.

There is a principle which favors state regulation of strictly state affairs, but it does not include the prohibition of the liquor traffic. It is bad enough to have international boundary lines along our border states over which booze may be bootlegged. It would be intolerable to have state lines of the same kind; conceivably in some cases allowing such a line on four sides of any one of our states.

Oregon must not allow the president of her state university, supported by the taxpayers, who are almost unanimously in favor of both national and state prohibition, to stand before the country and the world in such a light as Dr. Hall threw around himself, if the Associated Press reported him correctly yesterday—

And the action of her board of regents of the University of Oregon must be prompt and decisive. That is the only way to maintain the good name and proper dignity of this state.

CENTER OF BIG CUCUMBER INDUSTRY

Salem has become the center of a big and expanding cucumber industry—

We are growing a largely increased acreage of cucumbers for our salting and pickling factory in Salem, and for the salting factories at Woodburn and Albany—

And a considerable quantity each year under glass, for the fancy trade. The latter branch of the industry is capable of large expansion, and no doubt the production of pickling cucumbers will steadily increase, because we have most favorable soil and climatic conditions, with farmers who understand and fulfill the requirements of the packers; and we also produce to perfection the dill for the dill pickles.

We have a great diversity of crops now, compared with most sections—

But our conditions will admit of a much greater diversity, and still be within the lines of least resistance, doing the things that we can do better than other sections, or that we can do at lower cost.

We will never be living up to our opportunities till we live up to all our opportunities—

And we owe this to the hungry world, as well as to ourselves and our children and children's children.

Let's have a greater cucumber industry.

PIERCE AND KOZER SAY SPEECH UNFORTUNATE

those expressed by Dr. Hall can not wield that influence with the minds of the young people of Oregon which is demanded by the citizens of the state. I sincerely hope the reports will finally prove to be incorrect.

PORTLAND, June 30.—(By Associated Press.)—Criticism of national prohibition by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president-elect of the University of Oregon, in a speech at the commonwealth conference of the University of Iowa, was assailed here today by the Oregon Anti-Saloon league and the Portland Ministerial association. Both organizations adopted resolutions requesting the University of Oregon board of regents to obtain the full text of Dr. Hall's speech for further study.

"We express it as our firm conviction that the people of Oregon do not want as president of one of our great educational institutions a person holding such sentiments as are reported to have been expressed by Dr. Hall," said the Anti-Saloon league's resolution. Members of the board of regents promised to investigate the matter, but none indicated that Dr. Hall's speech would have any bearing on his inauguration this fall as president at Oregon.

The Dry Legion of America, a prohibition organization with headquarters here, sent a letter to the board of regents "protesting against the retention of Dr. Hall as president of the university unless he repudiates these sentiments."

The opinion that Dr. Hall will make a splendid president because he has the courage to his convictions was expressed by Philip L. Jackson, regent. "Every man in the republic has a right to his own beliefs. Dr. Hall evidently is not afraid to say what he thinks and for that reason will make a splendid president. As a newspaperman, I have no doubt but that the press dispatches were correct in their quotations from the speech of Dr. Hall. The regents will not have a meeting until fall, at which such a matter could be discussed.

Dr. Hall was elected to the presidency of the university and will be inaugurated this fall."

Mrs. George T. Gerlinger, regent, said:

"It will prejudice a great many people against him. However, it should be realized that Dr. Hall is still a private citizen, and speaks with the freedom about things which a private citizen has a right to do. He was not being interviewed, and he was not speaking as president of the University of Oregon. His was a private utterance before a small group of people. I have every confidence that as president of the University of Oregon he will not be inclined to take sides in questions that are matters of controversy. I believe that if the context of his speech were obtainable we would get a better idea of what he said.

CUCUMBERS UNDER GLASS IN SALEM

The cucumber industry of the Salem district, in the end of it represented by cucumbers under glass, is well represented by the Chestnut Farm greenhouse, on the extension of State street some rods beyond the state hospital grounds.

Here there are 7000 feet of cucumbers under glass, under the best conditions of such cultivation.

The Chestnut Farm people use a strain of their own. It is a cross of English Telegraph and Abundant varieties; mostly from the Abundant. They expect for the season about a dozen cucumbers to the vine; about 4000 vines. Very fine ones. Their market is all over this section; mostly through commission concerns.

On the Chestnut Farm, there are in all 12,500 square feet under glass, devoted to cucumbers and tomatoes. They use both the overhead and hose sprinkling systems.

They are considering extensions of their greenhouses and their operations. Miss H. Field is the manager, ably assisted by A. W. Bagley. The Chestnut Farm is a pioneer institution in Salem; has been in operation for many years.

Bits For Breakfast

Salem is a cuke center— That is, a cucumber center, and becoming every year more so.

The black cherry season is over, and it has turned out better than was expected. It would have been a still greater season but for the rains that cracked a percentage of the cherries.

"Monotonous standardization" troubles the gentle soul of Dr. Hall, president-elect of the University of Oregon. But there can be no such thing as an over standardization of decency.

The black cherry pool members, it is predicted, will net 10 to 12 cents a pound for their fruit. Might be a lot worse.

The Statesman of yesterday reported that the excursion of the members of the American Pomological society visited Woodburn and made a 10 minute stop at Hubbard. Chas. Will, secretary of the Hubbard Commercial club, wrote yesterday the following correction: "In this morning's edition of your good paper we notice that you have the enclosed. This is a mistake; no stop was made at Woodburn, the itinerary being direct from Salem to Hubbard as per schedule of party. At Hubbard the party remained one hour and were given a luncheon served by the Ladies' Home Improvement society of Hubbard. The arrangements were made by the Hubbard Commercial club. Woodburn, however, had a representative at Hubbard, who was also present at the banquet. Trusting you will make correction in your next issue.

The second deficiency bill which must be passed before the session ends was reported to the senate during the day, will be taken up tomorrow and leaders hope, will be in the hands of the president by Friday night.

With the house disposing of odds and ends, a wild scramble for action on senators pet measures is expected to follow disposition of the radio and deficiency bill. Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, is prepared to make a fight for an agreement to dispose

Side garage where a federal officer went to arrest Durkin for interstate transportation of a stolen automobile. "I begged Durkin to come in and square me with my wife for being gone the whole day after I was married," said the witness. So Durkin and the others entered, he said. Then Durkin asked him for his razor and shaved off his mustache. "I'd give 20 to have a mustache like that," Cserep said he remarked. "I don't see why you don't want to keep it."

And then, he declared, Durkin told him that he had gotten into trouble with a federal agent, the agent had accosted him as he stood by his car in the garage, and Durkin had faced him.

"Give me a chance," Cserep quoted Durkin as having related he said to Shanahan. "And I pulled a gun," he again quoted Durkin as saying, "and plugged him."
