

Oregon State Fair Grounds Improvements Increase Display Facilities

SUPERINTENDENTS NAMED FOR WORK

Better Accommodation Certain, Applications for Space Received

Numerous improvements on the Oregon state fair grounds this year give impetus to the annual event. Inasmuch as far better accommodations are offered generally and housing space problems for the various exhibits are in a good measure solved.

A modern concrete building, with a floor space of 120 by 300 feet, nearing completion just west of the main pavilion, will afford the showing of the finest and most comprehensive automobile exhibits ever staged at an Oregon state fair.

This building, built at a cost of $20,000, fills a long-cherished need for automobiles and auto accessories, and already with the opening date of the fair as far away as September 27, practically all floor room has been spoken for by dealers of the state.

Additional stable quarters have been joined to the main building to accommodate horse show animals. This covers a space of 40 by 300 feet and will take care of 100 mounts. Radical alterations are under way in the agricultural pavilion, with the art department switched to enlarged room on the second floor.

Changes are likewise noted in all the barns and main buildings, and even the grounds themselves have been extended to add to the beauty and interest of the fair. Fully an acre of lawn will be established by the time the fair opens, and many new flower beds and borders will add gay banners of color to the vista.

Work has been going on all summer on the race track, with the result that it is pronounced by horsemen in excellent condition. Many horses are being daily worked out and prospects are for a classy racing card.

In the way of exhibits response is unusually good, with a large number of counties already writing in to the office of Mrs. Ella S. Wilson, secretary, for space. Mt. Angel is planning a community exhibit, the first one of the kind made by that locality.

Indications are that the livestock exhibit will be the largest in history, with many of the most notable western breeders represented. This division will carry off a large percentage of the $80,000 that is offered in premiums and purses this year.

Superintendents of the various departments have been named as follows: J. E. Finnicum, Dayton, cattle; J. E. Reynolds, Corvallis, horses; Edward Shearer, Estacada, poultry, pigeons and rabbits; C. O. Garrett, Glendale, agriculture and horticulture; L. B. Ziemer, Portland, dairy department; Thomas W. Brunk, swine; J. J. Thompson, Macleay, sheep; William Schulmerich, Hillsboro, honey and bees; Mrs. Alice R. Webster, Portland, art; Mrs. W. A. Mullen, Salem, textile; Mrs. B. O. Schucking, Salem, domestic science; J. E. Calavan, Salem, educational department.

Members of the state fair board are: Horace Adin, Portland, president; J. E. Reynolds, La Grande, vice president; A. G. Marsters, Roseburg; F. E. Lynn, Perrydale; H. R. Crawford, Salem.

WARN RADIO FANS AGAINST SHOCKS

Warnings have been addressed to radio fans from time to time warning them against the danger of causing their aeriols to come in contact with high voltage wires.

Many city councils, including the council of Salem, have passed ordinances regulating the erection of these aeriols. In an effort to protect life and property.

A further warning to listeners in the care to be taken with regard to antenna, is the instant death of Paul V. Gullivary, a 20-year old grocery clerk at Paris, Ill. Young Gullivary noticed that his antenna had become loose and was near a high voltage wire. According to bystanders, he remarked that this was dangerous, at the same time giving the antenna a jerk. Instead of detaching it, as he expected, he only succeeded in jerking it across the high voltage wire. This brought with it a charge of 2300 volts, which killed him.

This unfortunate fatality is only one of several reported in recent months. Power companies, realizing the danger of these radio aeriols being in close proximity to high power wires, have prohibited the attachment of such aeriols to their power line poles.

SAMMY MANDELL WINS RING TITLE

Rockford Shiek Wins Referee's Decision Over Rocky Kansas

CHICAGO, July 3.—(By The Associated Press.)—In a down-pour of rain and with 15,000 to 20,000 spectators in attendance, youthful Sammy Mandell, the shiek of Rockford, Ill., won the world's lightweight championship today.

He was awarded a referee's decision over the grizzled Rocky Kansas of Buffalo, the jilted holder, after a 10 round contest in an open air arena signaling the opening of legalized boxing in Chicago.

Mandell in the opinion of the experts at the ringside, won from six to eight of the rounds by out-boxing and out-generalizing the veteran title holder. When the bell rang at the finish of the tenth, Referee Phil Collins unhesitatingly raised Mandell's water-soaked glove, giving him the championship.

Mandell popped left handers into Kansas' face and body with such swiftness and accuracy that the Buffalo veteran was bewildered in the attack. Kansas, however, never stopped trying to whip over a knockout punch, but most of his blows failed to find their mark.

The titleholder, battling courageously and aggressively, carried the fight to Mandell, but was ineffective in landing. He appeared to be himself in two or three rounds, cutting loose with a body attack that forced Mandell to break ground, but Mandell managed to escape without serious damage. This was especially true when Mandell was trapped in a corner and Kansas started whaling away, hoping to whip over a knockout punch. At the fight's progress, Kansas evidently realized that he was running second and made a desperate attempt in the ninth and tenth rounds to land a finishing blow. The elusive Mandell, however, maintained his lead and kept shooting his left into Kansas' reddened face, all ways keeping him off balance and never letting him get set.

The fight was staged under conditions unparalleled in modern ring history. For two hours previous showers swept the White Sox baseball park, drenching the spectators occupying the ring-side seats out in the open, and when Mandell and Kansas entered the ring, the felt padding and its canvas covering were rain-soaked, making the footing heavy and slippery.

Mandell slipped two or three times in furious mixups leading to clinches and the heavy-going also made conditions unfavorable for the title holder.

Kansas and his manager, Dan Rogers, were bitterly disappointed at the decision, the first under the new Illinois fight law.

"It was a shame for Rocky to lose the title under such circumstances," said Rogers. "In our judgment, the worst we should have received was a draw. It's a cinch we'll never get another match with Mandell, because he will not get within 20 miles of Kansas. The slippery ring bothered Rocky more than it did Mandell, because Rocky was unable to get set for his punches."

As Mandell left the arena, crowned the new lightweight champion, he was greeted with a tremendous round of cheers, mingled with a few hisses and boos. Some of the spectators evidently thought that the fight wasn't decisive enough for Kansas to lose his title.

Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, promised that the new title holder would be a fighting champion, meeting any logical contender after the Rockford shiek returns from a honeymoon next week. Mandell will be wedded to a boyhood sweetheart.

Sammy Mandell, the new lightweight champion, received the princely sum of 35 cents for winning his first ring engagement. He was rewarded with a bunch of bananas for his second.

His first battle which doesn't appear on the record books, was in a picnic grove at Rockford, Ill., his home, when somebody called him a "wop."

Mandell is just 23 years old and is of Italian parentage. He was born in Italy and was brought to this country by his father, along with his sisters and brothers, when he was a baby. Sammy's mother died when he was nine months old.

His sister, Marion, has been his guiding spirit and a mother to him. She instilled a liking for the church of religion in the new champion, impressed upon him the value of a clean life. His sister's teaching is the reason why Sammy never fails to attend church on Sunday and why he has never smoke or drank.

Mandell's right name is Samuel Mandello.

will convene as a trial court to consider house impeachment charges against Federal Judge English of Illinois.

The senate and house both convened today at 10 o'clock, two hours earlier than usual. The adjournment previously had been the issue, was brought up immediately in the senate by Curtis of Kansas, the republican leader, and was adopted without a record vote.

During the five hour final session, the senate, while the house was listening to the speech makers and clearing up odds and ends, adopted resolutions providing for investigation by a special committee of the alien property custodian's office and directing the shipping board and commerce department to determine how an efficient and permanent American merchant marine can be maintained.

It also received from Senator Norris of Nebraska, his resignation as chairman of the agriculture commission. Norris who has opposed the Coolidge administration on many policies, announced that he desired to devote more time to investigation of legislative matters, something he would be unable to do if he continued as chairman.

BUZZING OF CAMPAIGN BEE HEARD IN WEST

questioning among the politicians tonight about his future intentions toward the republican organization but he did not provide the answer.

Before it quit the senate also heard a democratic campaign speech by Senator Harrison of Mississippi. With the president almost within earshot in his office just off the senate chamber, the Mississippian sarcastically congratulated him upon his desire to get away to the Adirondacks for the summer, far from the circle of his party leaders in congress.

In the house at the same moment two party leaders were exchanging the opening shots of the coming battle for control. Tilsen of Connecticut, titular head of the house republicans, reviewed the accomplishments of the session and invited the democrats to attack it. Garrett of Tennessee, accepted the challenge and predicted a majority for his party after the votes are counted in November.

There have been many predictions that farm relief, the world court and other issues of the seven months session would be carried over into the campaign in which every member of the house and more than a third of the senators must face the folks back home and in many instances try conclusions with opponents who have dug their trenches while congress was lingering in Washington.

The campaign funds investigation had not been without its thrills for candidates for reelection. It is open talk on Capitol Hill that more than one member is looking forward with an absorbing wonder to the summer's activity mapped out by Chairman Reed and his investigators. It is argued hopefully that the cost of campaigning, like nearly everything else, has increased all around and that the country ought to understand it.

Of all these things, perhaps, farm relief was most often mentioned tonight where the paths of the scurrying members of congress crossed. In his summary of house accomplishments in the final hour today Representative Tilsen said it must be recognized that although the record compared favorably with any other in our national history, "the problem of agricultural production is still unsolved."

"But we can at least congratulate ourselves," he added, "that the problem was tackled with earnestness and patriotism."

Garrett in a two minute speech said his party "could not initiate prevent and in only a few instances amend legislation."

"The democratic party consequently will go to the country with the record of the session," he said, "I sincerely hope we firmly believe we will be able to return into political power."
