SHOULD HAVE A GIGANTIC GOAT INDUSTRY

Oregon is second only to Texas in total number of Angora goats, and the greater portion of the mohair is marketed in Salem. We have a growing milk goat industry in this state, though this branch is comparatively new.

But our state should be first in both lines, and we should manufacture in western Oregon the $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 worth (at retail) of the Roquefort cheese which we import in the United States.

For there is room for vast expansion. Oregon should have a couple of million of Angora goats, and more, and the number of milk goats ought to run into the hundreds of thousands in the Salem district.

Salem ought to be by long odds the greatest goat center in the United States. This is the best goat country in the world. The first Roquefort cheese factory in the United States, making the product from the milk of goats, is at Falls City, in Salem's trading district, and this factory is a success and is pointing the way to a gigantic industry.

To an industry that should be built up in this section to the point of keeping in our own country the amount that is being spent annually in the United States for this cheese that is made in southern France.

Too much stress cannot be placed upon this prospect. The industry cannot be overdone, at least in the present generation. The quality of the Roquefort cheese being made here at Falls City is equal to that of the article imported from France, and the Falls City cheese is made under conditions of absolute cleanliness. It is an industry upon which our district may build with absolute confidence. The way is clear and plain.

We should have condensed milk factories, using the milk of goats, and dried milk factories.

Nature has made this a great goat country; better even than Turkey or South Africa. Our people should avail themselves fully of the advantages nature has given them.

Angora goats have long been known to our people as being of great value in clearing land. Late experiments show that they are of wonderful help in increasing the production of grain crops.

The United States has become the great manufacturing country for the various articles of commerce made of mohair, with a rapidly extending list.

Till now we use all the mohair we produce, and about a third of that produced in the rest of the world besides.

Oregon can and should produce all the mohair we now import for our factories, besides the additional amount that is being required each year by the fast expanding demand for various articles made from mohair by our forward looking American manufacturers.

Bits For Breakfast

Oregon, second goat state—

Ought to be, must be the first.

Oregon can supply the 8,000,000 pounds, annually of mohair the United States imports, and the $70,000,000 (retail price) of Roquefort cheese this country gets each year from southern France.

Talking of goats, you see thousands of them in the story "Grass," on the screen at the Oregon theater this afternoon and evening. But they are different goats, not Angoras, and not milk goats of the kind known among us.

The emergency board yesterday put its o. k. on the proposition to get the money to pay the farmers for their flax. The Ladd & Bush bank will now buy the certificates, and they will be redeemed from the sales of the manufactured stock—the seed and fiber and tow. The credit of the whole state is thus put behind the certificates, but the money will all come out of the business of the state flax plant, and there will be $350,000 to $400,000 to the good, when the crop delivered this year is all worked up. There is enough of former crops to pay back all the money, when it is all worked up and sold.

In other words, the state flax plant will be ahead all this year's crop, and all the buildings and machinery. With good luck, there will be enough money to pay for raw materials next year, and in the years thereafter there will always be a surplus in the revolving fund.

The flax tour of 1927 should show a lot more progress. Perhaps a specialty mill being built, or in the offing. It will come as soon as there is enough long line fiber yarn of the proper ten or fineness on hand, with the supply assured permanently. But this will take more rotting and scutching mills. There is only enough in sight now for an eight hour shift of the two Salem linen mills.

Dr. G. R. Vehrs of Salem is a moving picture fan. He is taking moving pictures of all the flax scenes and the tour crowds yesterday. Perhaps you will see these on the screens at the theaters soon.

One Hundred and Sixty National Forests Dot U. S. Today

Today there are 160 national forests in this country totaling more than 158,000,000 acres, according to a book recently issued by the American Tree association. BLAZE DESTROYS MILL

ELLENSBURG SAWMILL BURNS; TOWN FIGHTS FIRE
 ELLENSBURG, Wash., July 14.—(By Associated Press)—Fire tonight destroyed a sawmill of the Ellensburg Milling company here and flying embers ignited a half dozen other buildings, including the town's fire station and a sub-station of the municipal electric power system. The buildings are on the west edge of the business district.
 The mill fire was discovered while firemen sought to extinguish fires in two residences south of the city limits. The residence in which the blaze started was owned by D. F. Reed, owner of the saw mill.
 Virtually every inhabitant of the town fought the flames. The buildings which had caught fire a half hour after the mill blaze started were in a radius of two blocks of it.
 The mill was valued at approximately $100,000.

The accident took place when the machine traveling west and driven by England instead of making the turn by the Union station crashed into a steel lamp post.

DINNER STORIES

For weeks he had been ill in the hospital. With the beginning of convalescence he called loudly for food, declaring he was being starved.

"The doctor says you may have something tomorrow," said the nurse, soothingly.

"On the morrow she entered and announced: 'Here's your dinner.' And she gave him a spoonful of tapioca, adding: 'The doctor says that everything else you do must be in the same proportion.'"

"Nurse," he gasped, "I want to do some reading now; please bring me a postage stamp."

John was the son of parents who were sufficiently popular to receive more invitations than they could conveniently accept, reports Tit-Bits. In the course of a general knowledge lesson, the master asked: "Can any boy tell me the meaning of the letters R S V P?" John's hand shot up. "Well?" said the master. "It means," explained John, "rush in, shake hands, and vanish pleasantly."

SUNDAY CLOSING SOUGHT

INJUNCTION IS ASKED AGAINST SESQUI OPENING
 PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—(By Associated Press)—Filing of an application for an injunction against opening the Sesqui-Centennial exposition on Sunday and the issuance of warrants for the arrest of 12 exposition employees, charged with violating the state law of 1794 pertaining to Sunday amusements, were developments today in the campaign of ministers and others to keep the exposition closed on the Sabbath.

Common pleas court judge Thomas D. Finletter set net Monday to hear arguments for the injunction, the application was filed by an attorney for the Methodist Men's Committee and the same organization applied for the warrants. These charged gatekeepers and ticket sellers with misdemeanors, but the fone constable sent to serve them reported little success.

DePaolo Pledges Safety On Pair of His Baby's Shoes

INDIANAPOLIS.—(AP)—A pair of baby shoes was worth $97,500 in cash to Pete DePaolo last year, but they failed to bring him victory at the recent international speedway race.

The 1925 American automobile racing champion, who also leads the pack for 1926, attributes his success to the fact that a pair of his youngster's boots hangs from the front axle of his car in every contest. His cash winnings aggregated approximately $97,500.

DePaolo is superstitious only in that one respect. He said from the time he attached the shoes he has not had a serious accident. They will be his good-luck piece until he quits the sport.

The champion driver had two new cars in the Indianapolis race and the shoes were switched to the one he selected to pilot.

FATHER PLEADS FOR SON

ROBERT SCOTT IS DECLARED NOT LEADER IN CRIME
 CHICAGO, July 14.—(By Associated Press.)—Consideration of Robert B. Scott's plea of guilty and the expressed belief that he was without the instinct to murder and was dominated by his older brother Russell T. Scott, led Judge William N. Gemmill today to sentence him to life imprisonment.

Russell Scott is under sentence to be hanged October 15, next, for the murder of Joseph Maurer, a drug clerk, shot to death when the Scott brothers robbed the city hall pharmacy in downtown Chicago the night of April 1, 1924.

"Russell Scott took the leadership throughout," said Judge Gemmill preliminary to imposing sentence. "He used threatening language. There was nothing of the kind shown so far as Robert was concerned. There is no longer any question or doubt that Russell fired the fatal shot. There is no question about both being guilty of murder, but they are not evenly guilty."

"Robert Scott was not the leader," said Russell, "had been in the employ of the brother."

"It seems to be true he did not intend to kill. Had Robert been as bloodthirsty as most of the robbers we try he could have killed Maurer at any time."
