

DARLING TO RETIRE ON PENSION SOON

After 42 Years of Service, Ticket Agent Will Leave S. P. Service

After 42 years work with the Southern Pacific company in Salem, O. L. Darling, ticket agent here, will retire on a pension within the next two weeks. His successor has not been named.

Mr. Darling has seen Salem grow from a backwoods frontier town to its present size. Soon after he came here there was a building boom and property formerly worth $200 an acre became in a short time valued at $700 an acre.

Mr. Darling began railroad work in Illinois, but came to Grants Pass with the Southern Pacific soon after. He moved to Salem later and was married to Miss Hinkle, a student at Willamette university.

He will go to the coast soon for a brief vacation.

FALL MOTOR BILL CRITICISM FILED

Argument of County Courts Against Measure Placed on Records

The state judges and commissioners' association yesterday filed in the offices of the secretary of state here the argument of the county courts against the Oregon Motor Stage association bill which will go before the voters at the November election. The argument will be printed in the voters' pamphlet.

Excerpts from the argument follow:

"That the bill, if adopted, would be unconstitutional as to intrastate motor transportation companies.

"That the bill applies to private as well as common carriers, and is on that account, unconstitutional.

"That the bill contains no saving clause, and consequently if any part of the bill is declared to be unconstitutional, the entire measure would fall.

"That the motor stage bill does not, in itself, impose any charge. It merely authorizes the public service commission, in its discretion, to impose a charge.

"Even if the bill should become effective, and if the fees it prescribes should be exacted, it would not, as it purports to do, require trucks and buses to pay much more money than exacted at the present time."

RESCUE SPEEDER INJURES ANOTHER

ELSINORE THEATRE VAUDEVILLE LISTED

Five Excellent Acts to Be Shown in Connection With Feature Picture

Variety is the keynote of the Association vaudeville bill coming to the Elsinore theater today with everyone of the five acts widely varied and novel in character.

Topping the program is DeWitt, Burns & Torrence's offering, "The Awakening of Toys," a fantastic arrangement of mechanical toy characters in the land of make-believe. In the act, dolls dance, a wooden soldier marches and a big giant comes and eats up all the little animals, including the Teddy Bear.

"The Kill Kare Couple," John and Winkle Hennings will be heard in an eccentric musical, song, dance and talking act. Miss Hennings with a cornet and Mr. Hennings with a trombone invariably stir up gates of merriment.

The Tri-State Four, billed as

"Monarchs of Mirth and Melody," will entertain with an assortment of song numbers of the latest vintage.

Charles and Grace Keating in their act, "Their First Love," present an skillful blend of humor and pathos. Charles Keating in the character of the Huckleberry Finn type, creates much merriment in his characterization.

Dexterity, versatility and ability are the outstanding features of the offering presented by Miss Della O'Dell, "The Little Lady With the Samson-like Strength" who handles the big weights with ease.

The feature picture on today's Elsinore bill will be "Off the Highway," an astounding story of a bitter old recluse who sacrificed money, name and power to learn the truth about himself. The case includes William V. Mong, Marguerite De La Motte, John Bowers and a number of other star players.
