them on company property. Protest petitions were circulated among white residents of the town soon afterward and several public meetings were held to discuss the presence of Oriental laborers. A crowd of several hundred whites on the afternoon of July 12 marched to the mill and after an altercation with mill officials and deputized watchmen, entered the Japanese quarter. The effects of the Japanese were loaded on trucks and hauled to Corvallis, followed by the Japanese in automobiles. The defendants were alleged to have been the leading spirits in the affair. Four similar suits are pending in the federal court. Counsel for the plaintiff did not regard the amount of damages awarded as important. "If the Toledo people had won this case, other communities would copy their action and soon the Japanese would not be allowed to work anywhere in the country," said John Collier of the plaintiff's counsel. "Such a situation would be wholly incompatible with the rights granted under Japanese treaty." Portland Japanese expressed great satisfaction over the verdict.

GOETHE RELATIVE FOUND PAINTER AT EUGENE IS DESCENDANT FAMOUS AUTHOR

EUGENE, Ore., July 23.—(By Associated Press.)—Glanes Sidney Goethe, painter, was discovered in a studio here today and from his story is believed to be the great-great-grandson of Johann Wolfgang Goethe, immortal German author and poet. Goethe is painting a miniature scene which he hopes will be accepted as the stage setting for the pageant of Klatawa, to be presented during the "trial to rail" celebration August 19 and 20. He professes to know little of the man who perhaps ranks next to Shakespeare in the world of letters and drama. "All I really know of him is what I have read from books," he said.
