Two Killed When Train Is Derailed in Georgia

A broken locomotive wheel resulted in the derailment of a Louisville & Nashville train near Canton, Ga., and brought about the deaths of the engineer and fireman. The passenger coaches miraculously escaped serious injury. The illustration shows the baggage car, which plunged down an embankment on top of the derailed engine.

THAT TERRIBLE THORNE-GIRL

BY FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

Mr. McKenna's gaze, as he looked at Steve, was very warm and friendly.

"Well, where is she, then? I've got to see her."

"I can't tell you. She made me promise not to give anyone her address."

"But—that doesn't mean me!"

"Yes, it does. I gave her my word." Mr. McKenna shook his head sternly, but there was no sternness in his eyes. "But," he went on, "she told me you were interested in archaeology—ruins, things like that. So am I. And I've just heard of a new book on the Maya ruins in Yucatan. A wonderful book. You'd enjoy it. I'm sure. If you go to"—he named a famous Fifth Avenue bookstore—"and ask for it, I feel sure you'll be repaid." His bright grey eyes, full of meaning, met Steve's held them. Perhaps there was a droop of an eyelid. Mr. Hollins reading their unspoken, message smiled gaily.

"I get you, Mr. McKenna," he said. "Just drop in, casual like, and ask for the latest work on my favorite subject. What could be sweeter?"

"And if you don't find it at first why, keep on looking."

"I'll do that little thing," Steve grinned, reaching for his hat. But Mr. McKenna stopped him.

"What's your hurry, young man?" he asked. "You'd best spend the night here. I want to talk to you about Mary. And that book I've been telling you about may not be in for a day or two yet. It's my opinion you'd be wise to wait awhile—give things a chance to settle down." He smiled mischievously. "Do you apprehend my meaning?"

"Perfectly," said Steve, tossing his hat into a corner.

It was not until noon the next day that he boarded a train for New York. The following morning found him entering the bookstore on Fifth Avenue.

To the clerk, who came up to him, he gave a smiling excuse.

"Just looking around," he said and began a leisurely stroll through the store. Mr. Hollins was indeed looking around, his soul in his eyes. But when he at length described a familiar slender and attractive figure in the rear of the store his expression became puzzled. Since when had Mary McKenna boasted cinnamon red hair? He reached her in half a dozen eager strides. Sylvia, standing before a counter of children's books looked up, turned white and gasped.

"Steve!" she exclaimed. "What are you doing here?"

"I guess this store's open to the public," Steve replied sturdily. "A lot of people seem to be coming in. Why not me? As a matter of fact I'm looking for a book on the Maya—my God, Mary, what have you been doing to your hair?"

"Why—I had it dyed, so no one would recognize me."

"If—m—" Steve gazed at her thoughtfully. "Let's go to lunch?"

"Don't be silly. It's only eleven o'clock."

"Oh, well—take a walk then."

"You know I can't do that. I'm working." The quick happiness which had flamed in Sylvia's eyes began to disappear. Once more the old question rose in her mind. How could she tell him?

Under cover of a pretended interest in her books, Steve was speaking rapidly.

"I've got to get you alone somewhere, so I can ask you to marry me—again."

"Before you do that," Sylvia warned him, "there's something I must tell you."

"If you mean about the mixup in Hollywood," Steve said, smiling

"What do we know about her, anyway? What does Steve know about her? That her father keeps a bookstore in some small town out in Pennsylvania—that she herself works in a shop on Fifth Avenue. Not much of a background, I must say."

"Well, Julia," Mrs. Hollins remarked, trying her best to be just, "there's nothing dishonorable about keeping a bookstore—or in working in one, either. A great many society women go in for that sort of thing, nowadays. This girl seems to me a very modest and well-bred young person."

"Her hair's dyed," Julia snapped. "What's the reason for that?"

Mrs. Hollins, unable to offer any answer to the question, remained silent.

"I could tell, easy enough, by looking at the roots. Her real hair is brown. Why should a girl of her age—under twenty, she claims—want to dye her hair? Do you think it could be a disguise? She

CAN'T BEAT "TIZ" WHEN FEET HURT

Just take your shoes off and then get those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunions-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your feet will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all this—just try "Tiz". It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz". It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudates which puff up your feet and cause foot torture. A few cents buy a box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get how comfortable your shoes feel.
