Half of them got the habit from associating with other addicts.

"The consumption of narcotics in the United States is eight grains per capita, twice as much as in any other country. France comes second with four grains per capita. Over 2000 tons of opium are raised annually, and most of it is exported, 15 times as much as is needed for medical use."

The best way of fighting the evil is by curbing production, according to Mr. Neuner. The league of nations opium commission is working for this and has succeeded in persuading India to cut down its production of opium annually until it is stopped alto-
