Dominating Actors Hit by Playwright O'Casey

LONDON .- "Dominating actors" are the curse of the London stage and ought to "be hit on the head."

At least this is what the Irish playwright, Sean O'Casey, thinks. He says that actors who want to make their roles the dominating parts thereby "hogging" the play for themselves ruin many a per formance.

Sean O'Casey views have been widely heralded in theatrical circles and many dramatic critics ery siring their cominns about the criticism.

Virtually all the professional critics agree the "dominating actare inclined to agree that the star" aystem is now much in the discard and actors pre not permitted to threw a play out of perspective to the same degree thay were a few years ago. The second of the view of the
