West Demands Fair Tariff Treatment, Senator Tells Chief

PRESIDENT IS ANXIOUS

Desire for Agricultural Legislation Along Price Fixing Lines Will Find New Strength

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., Aug. 20.—(By Associated Press.)—The agricultural west stands for a protective tariff and in the new congress to be elected this fall, will demand a revision upward for some farm products.

The Kansas senator also predicted that as a result of the congressional elections in the west, there would be stronger demand than ever in the new congress for agricultural legislation along the price stabilization lines of the McNary-Haugen bill that was defeated in the recent session.

The views of Mr. Capper were set forth during a visit to President Coolidge and, in picturing prospective conditions in the west, was joined by another summer White House guest, Julius Rosenwald of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, who reported to the president on business and economic conditions generally.

The Kansas and Illinois men, however, differed as to what measures should be adopted by the government in its basic program for aiding the agricultural industry, the latter opposing the price stabilization views set forth by the former.

Other views of the agricultural situation, however, are to be received by Mr. Coolidge immediately, with Secretary Jardine of the department of agriculture being received tomorrow and Louis J. Taber, of Ohio, master of the National Grange on Monday.

The agricultural west, Senator Capper said, does not think it is getting all that is coming to it on

Public Market Will Face Marion Square If Okeyed

Committee Asks That Proposed Site Be Carefully Considered, Other Locations Believed to Present Insurmountable Difficulties

After considering a number of possible locations in various parts of Salem's business district, the special public market committee appointed recently by Mayor John B. Giesy, last night tentatively located the proposed market on the parking strip along the northern side of Marion street between Front and Commercial, in the southern edge of Madison square.

Decision to locate the market there was not made suddenly, but following several weeks of consideration by the committee members, who interviewed citizens and property owners, investigated sites, and weighed possibilities of each one carefully.

The location decided upon is not necessarily the one to be used finally, as the committee welcomes criticism or suggestions made in a constructive manner that will help to find a better location, provided one is available.

The Marion street location possesses many advantages, having plenty of space for all farmers and growers. The block is 330 feet long, and the committee estimates that between 35 and 40 stalls seven feet wide can be built and still leave plenty of alley room.

It possesses one disadvantage in not being as close to the center of the business district as some of the others considered, but the more centrally located sites all were found to possess disadvantages that would outweigh the good points.

It is proposed to erect an umbrella-type covering to extend the length of the block and shelter the stalls. The proposed shelter would be covered with composition roofing to keep out rain, and counter facilities for the sale of goods would be built.

PREDICTS REVOLT, JAILED

NEAL WARNS COOLIDGE UP-RISING IS WELL PLANNED

BERKELEY, Cal., Aug. 20.—(By Associated Press.)—Clarence Neal, 30, was arrested here today and will be turned over to federal authorities for examination as the result of a charge against him that he wrote President Coolidge letters in which he asserted the Masons and the Knights of Columbus were conspiring to overthrow the government.

Postal inspectors made the arrest on the receipt of a telegraphic warrant from Washington. This alleged that Neal's recent letters had embodied any threats against the president.

GAINES APPEAL WILL HIT SNAG

Even More Convincing Evidence Promised by State If Case Reopens

NEW JURY PLAN LAUDED

Story of Method Used in Uncovering Facts Reveals Merits in Selective Jury Systems

SEATTLE, Aug. 20.—(By Associated Press.)—Attorneys for the state announced late today that they were confident that if a new trial is granted Wallace Cloyes Gaines, convicted by a superior court jury here last night, of murdering his daughter, Sylvia, they will be able to introduce even more convincing evidence against the prisoner. The jury fixed Gaines' penalty at death.

"I cannot reveal the evidence which we have given prosecutor Colvin," said Under-Sheriff Hutcherson, "but I can say that if Gaines is tried again, this evidence will make the case against him stronger than it was.

Sheriff Starwich, who was instrumental in gathering the majority of the evidence against the condemned man, making known some of the inside high lights in the case, declared he first found two witnesses, who apparently saw the crime. They were Odessa Kasikill and Dwight Kallum.

OREGON BREEDERS JOIN BETTER POULTRY MEET

BROWNELL, COCKELL, LYNN ARE NAMED OFFICERS

Seventy Breeders Present as State Cooperative Organization Is Organized

The Oregon Accredited Hatchery and Breeders Cooperative became a permanent organization yesterday at a mass meeting of poultry growers from many parts of Oregon, held in the chamber of commerce rooms here.

Launching the certified poultry movement in this state was not without its troubles up to the very last of the meeting yesterday—troubles common to many cooperative ventures—but the day closed with 20 breeders, hatcheries and flock owners signed up, and five permanent officers elected.

Three of the temporary officers were re-chosen in the election. These were Ambrose Brownell, Milwaukie, president; F. H. Cockell, Milwaukie, vice president, and A. G. Lunn, Corvallis, secretary-treasurer. Directors elected are Wesley M. Wire, Newberg, and Elmer Gribble, Canby.

More than 70 poultrymen and poultrywomen attended the meet.

Cities of Oregon Join in Presentation of Modern Trade and Commerce, as Fete Closes

EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 20.—(By Associated Press.)—An epic of the west with the trials and privations of the early settlers was depicted in a colorful, splendid drama of the sweep of progress, told in the "Trail to Rail" celebration today, which ended tonight. Cities throughout the state participated in the event which will form a lasting tribute to Oregon's pioneers.

The story was told in long processions, in parades of industry and communities, showing an Oregon advanced, united, prosperous; the day before, a parade of pioneers, of crude vehicles, implements, indisputable proof of courage to break the barriers, physical and commercial, that the west might prosper.

Eugene received the event as a celebration of completion of the Cascade Line route of the Southern Pacific railroad, opening up southern central Oregon, and its millions in resources. As the idea expanded it became a commemoration not of an event but of a whole chain of events spanning

SEED OF FLAX FREE OF RUST

U. S. Department of Agriculture Declares Trouble Is Only Seasonable

INVESTIGATION STARTED

Experts, in Letters, Declare Procuring New Seed for Planting Is Unnecessary in Valley Section

Soon after the beginning of flax harvest, a few weeks ago, it was found that some of the fields, especially in the Aumsville and Turner districts, were infected, either in spots or throughout whole fields, with the flax rust. There was naturally some alarm over the situation—

Especially on account of the fact that the first few hundred tons of flax received had been put into the warehouses at the state flax plant without much regard to keeping them separated by farms or districts, and there was no one who could be certain whether or not the rust might or might not be carried in the seed.

Later, there was more care in keeping the flax from different farms and sections separated in storing it.

There will be a good deal of relief, in various sections, when it is shown, as is authoritatively shown below, that the rust is NOT CARRIED ON THE SEED. This is the word of L. N. Gooding, of the United States department of agriculture, who is vouched for by C. J. McIntosh, publicity man of the Oregon Agricultural college, well known to many Statesman readers.

It was at first feared that the appearance of the rust might necessitate the bringing in of a lot of seed from other countries, to play safe with the 1927 flax crop here. It is now evident that this will not be necessary.

Of course, flax should be rotated. In the best flax districts in Ireland, it has a seven year rotation.
