UNCOVER EVIDENCE IN MELLET SLAYING

Detectives Will Break Down Statements of Canton Detective

CANTON, Ohio, Aug. 20.—(By Associated Press.)—Investigators into the murder of Don R. Mellet, publisher of the Canton Daily News, slain five weeks ago tonight, declared tonight that new evidence, sufficient not only to connect a Canton detective with bootlegging activities, but possibly to link him with the murder, has been obtained.

They said an arrest might be expected soon, but did not indicate upon which charge it would be based.

Investigators declared today they had ample evidence to break down the statement of Floyd Streitenberger, detective of the Canton city police force, concerning the whereabouts of Louis Mazer, charged with the murder. Streitenberger was to have been sought for questioning this afternoon but was found to have left the city. It was at first feared he had fled, but a check up showed he had gone to another city to bring a prisoner to this city.

Streitenberger issued a statement today in which he alleged that a certain portion of an affidavit made in Buffalo, N. Y., by Clement A. Curry, a reporter for the Buffalo Courier-Express, was incorrect. Streitenberger declared he was misquoted on the number of times he had seen or talked with Mazer since he arrested him three years ago.

Curry, however, is said to have declared he could produce six witnesses to whom Streitenberger made corroborative statements.

Investigators here tonight scoffed at the report that Bernard McDermott, brother of Patrick Eugene McDermott, is said to have declared he believed his brother had met with foul play. The officials scouted the idea, and express confidence that McDermott is in hiding and that the officials are trying to have him come before them for questioning.

NAVY TO SPEND HUGE AIR SUMS

Rear Admiral Moffatt Announces Plans Calling for 12 Millions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Moffatt, navy air chief, today announced plans for expenditure during this fiscal year of approximately $12,000,000 made available by congress for purchase of new naval airplanes.

The program is expected to add 282 ships to the navy air fleet, 100 of them being fighting planes, 47 observation planes, 61 bombing planes, torpedo and scouting planes, and 74 training planes. Designs for the new planes will be determined in competitive flight tests and the navy department expects about 24 airplane manufacturing concerns to participate in the competition.

The program plan outlined by Admiral Moffatt indicates that more planes than originally expected will be obtained with the funds available due largely to decreased prices for certain types of ships. The program is part of the normal navy aviation plan and does not include any part of the navy five year expansion project authorized by congress. Funds for the five year plan will be available the first of July, 1927.

OREGON BREEDERS JOIN BETTER POULTRY MEET

Some representing the largest hatcheries and breeding flocks in the state. After recounting what had been done in the way of preliminary organization, Chairman Brownell called for discussion of the proposed plan as set forth in the by-laws. This discussion soon brought out the fact that breeders as a class were anxious to establish the certification work at once and were ready to make concessions, if necessary, to this end. Hatcherymen, on the other hand, were less enthusiastic, some openly voicing their opposition to the movement.

Of those who finally signed up, 13 were breeders, five were hatcherymen and five were flock owners in the classifications provided in the membership. Several signed up in more than one class. As several points of controversy arose that could not be settled without further investigation of prevailing practices in other associations, those who signed did so with the understanding that a later meeting will be held in the near future, at which a settlement of all uncertain points will be reached, each member having the right at that time to withdraw and have his fees refunded in case he is dissatisfied. It was announced that for the

GRAUSTARK FILM NOW AT ELSINORE

Marion Davies Masquerades as Crown Prince in Latest Picture

"The Three Musketeers," "Jaffery," and "The White Company" made a man out of Marion Davies! These are the three books, chosen by the Cosmopolitan star as echoing the most purely male psychology she could think of, which she read and studied before embarking on her masculine masquerade as the crown prince in her new Cosmopolitan production, "Beverly of Graustark."

To enact a man successfully, Miss Davies decided that she must first understand male psychology—in fact become so steeped in it that her feminine side of her nature would practically vanish. The best way to accomplish this, she decided, was to read books echoing man's psychology and male ideas, while at the same time describing male deportment and mannerisms.

How well the formula worked can be seen at the Elsinore theatre today where her new picture is now being shown. Every day, before donning her uniform, the star delved into the adventures of Athos, Porthos and Aramis, or into the doings of the ultra modern swashbuckler of the Locke romance, embellishing these impressions with bits from the Conan Doyle novel.

"It is a fact," she says, "that after reading a while it became natural to wear a uniform. It's easy enough to get into a uniform, but mighty hard to look natural in it unless you actually think in male terms and do it naturally—a stiff problem for a woman."

Miss Davies says her reading did more to help her in the difficult role than anything she did. first year, while the membership is comparatively small, the work of supervision and inspection will be in charge of H. E. Cosby, extension specialist in poultry at OAC, thus reducing the costs while the association becomes established. The association is incorporated under the cooperative laws of this state and as such is entirely a non-profit concern, it was announced. Its objects, as set forth in the by-laws, are to improve the standard of the poultry of its members by official supervision, inspection and certification of breeding stock, hatcheries and flocks.

Products of the members, after passing rigid inspection, may be sold as certified or accredited eggs, chicks or breeding stock, and may be advertised as such under a uniform trade-mark to be adopted by the association.

Such an association has been operating in Washington for four years and another is organized in California. Organization of the Oregon association was hastened, it is said, by the action of Washington in placing an embargo on all Oregon chicks, which embargo has since been lifted for one year.

"SCARLET SAINT" IS LOVE CARNIVAL

Oregon Film Embodies New Orleans Actual Mardi Gras Fete

Lloyd Hughes and Mary Astor, two of filmdom's most popular young stars, have the leading roles in "The Scarlet Saint." First National's romantic drama of New Orleans at the Oregon theatre today.

Colorful Mardi Gras scenes taken in the southern city during the picturesque festival form the background of this highly entertaining story, based on Gerold Beaumont's story, "The Lady Who Played Fidele," deals with the romance of a New Orleans beauty, who is forced to marry a man she does not love through a promise made by her father years before.

Horse racing, a prominent feature of Mardi Gras week, figures in the picture, and patrons of the Oregon theatre will be treated to several sensational horse-racing episodes. Two famous race tracks, Belmont and Empire, were used during the filming of the big race scenes.

The colorful and fantastic Mardi Gras scenes, embodied in the picture version of the Beaumont story, were photographed by First National cameramen at the New Orleans carnival last year. The more intimate scenes of the festival were taken at the company's eastern studio.

Determined to give picture patrons a realistic setting for the New Orleans story, First National cameramen were sent to the southern metropolis and took street scenes in which the merry-makers disported themselves in and about the highways and byways. But the most unique of all the scenes taken were those shot at the famous Duke of Alexis bry in the Tulane theatre.

WESTERN EPIC CLOSES EUGENE CELEBRATION

The whole history of the west. The idea took root in other communities, until more than a score participated and so the celebration today and yesterday was an Oregon celebration, a Pacific coast celebration.

Portland came with two bands, American Legion drum corps, a long line of floats and 250 leading business and professional men to join in the parade today. Hillsboro was represented by the Oregon Dower Queen, Salem, sent its Chorians and a band, Junction City, had a float, Bend, sent its beach men and a float, Corvallis was represented by a long line of decorated cars, escort for her prizes, Springfield sent marchers and a float.

The prize-winning American Legion drum corps of Bend, in their snappy uniforms of blue and gold, drew applause all along the route. Grants Pass came pranced with war clubs in the mist that fell, muttering hoarsely "It's the climate."

Vancouver had a girls' string band and a float. Klamath Falls had one of the largest representations with a band, the Pelicans marching in a body, with floats and a large delegation of citizens. Albany entered floats and a girls' band.

"What a celebration you have made," said Governor Pierce. "Never was there a play I believe on the coast exceeding this pageant. I am happy to be governor at a time when we are doing such things."

Legislation: Something that makes justice cost us more than we can afford to pay.
