THE WIND SWEEP OVER THE HILL

The wind swept over the hill today,
Romed over the firs and dusty oaks,
Jostled the yellow grass in play
And rustled the corn with his merry jokes.

The wind danced over the hill to-day
With the tang of salt in his wake,
Like a sailor bold he had a way—
You know the way bold sailors take!

He played a gay hornpipe for me
And my feet scarce touched the grass.
A song he sang of a starlit sea,
A man, a moon, and a lass.

Oh, the tales I heard within my ear
Must never, no, never be told.
But, sometime, maybe, you may hear—
If your heart is not withered and old.

Perry Prescott Reigelman.

Three Matrons Entertain at Late Summer Tea

Exceedingly attractive among the social affairs of mid-August was the tea on Thursday afternoon at which Mrs. Homer H. Smith, Mrs. F. W. Poorman and Mrs. Ludlow R. LeFurge were hostesses at the Homer Smith home. Since a rainy afternoon made it impossible to serve in the garden, the tea table was placed indoors. Little Miss Eleanor Luper greeted the guests at the door while the hostesses made up the receiving line.

Assisting in the rooms were Mrs. Walter J. Kirk, Mrs. Karl Becke, Mrs. Allan Carson, Mrs. Orris Fry, Miss Helen Kafoury, Miss Mary Kafoury, Mrs. Clifford Farmer, Mrs. E. N. Gillingham and Mrs. Lloyd Farmer.

Pink stinnias, blue ageratum and salmon pink snapdragons were effectively combined on the center table, while old rose tapers burned in silver holders.

A variety of the most attractive garden flowers were arranged about the rooms.

Presiding at the urns during the afternoon were Mrs. Josephine Stewart, Mrs. Jennie Buick, Mrs. Grover C. Bellinger and Mrs. Daryl Proctor.
