Each Won Over Cyclops and Was Defeated by Montavilla Club

Two games will be played by the Salem Senators this week and with the Port of Portland team as the opponent in both. The first game will be Sunday afternoon and the second Monday, as a part of the local Labor Day celebration.

Tough battles are expected in both games, as the Port of Portland appears to be, about the equal of the Senators.

greater part of the season, is also with a Timber league team. He appears to be making good, as he pitched a three hit shutout in his last start.

Equal success is expected for Ridings, who has been one of the chief offensive threats of the Senators all season. He hits the ball with a big swing and it generally goes for a long ride.

To fill Ridings' hole in the Salem infield, Manager "Biddy" Bishop has acquired a player named Hornsby, who has been playing shortstop for the Kalama team all season. He is said to be a good fielder and heavy hitter, Salem fans hope he will be as good as his illustrious major league namesake.

King Cole, former Senator, is expected to pitch for the Port team in Sunday's game, and Traynor, former Columbia university pitcher, in the second. Cole has been one of the biggest winners in semi-pro ball this summer, and Traynor has been making an excellent record in his first season since leaving school.

Turpin will pitch for the Senators Sunday, with Russell on the mound Monday, manager Bishop stated yesterday.

Confidence Is Expressed in Keene, Though Time Will Be Required

Ways and means for building up the athletic situation at Willamette University and putting it on a proper footing were discussed at a meeting of the Willamette university booster's club yesterday. The first steps along this line will be to get the Salem business men behind the university's athletic program.

A new era of athletic success is expected with the new coaching administration under R. S. Keene, formerly of OAC, who takes over the coaching job at Willamette university the 15th of this month.

The group expressed confidence in Coach Keene and his ability to build up a good name in athletics for Willamette, but not much is looked for this year. With practically no experienced material and little football interest, it will be a long hard job lasting several seasons to get the university back to a high place in athletics.

Realizing that in these days for a college to have a successful football team, it must go out and get the material, the club will take steps to persuade valuable high school athletic material to enter the school. No football team can be built from inexperienced men; in spite of what many people seem to think, but the competition these days is so keen and coaching is so highly developed that it is necessary to get men who know something about the game.

Jaffa Oranges Thought to Have Magic Virtues

JAFFA, Palestine.—The delicious taste and unique fragrance of the Jaffa orange has caused it to become more and more popular in Europe, but the belief that it is possessed of almost magic virtues as a preventive against infectious diseases is held to be mainly responsible for its ever-growing vogue.

The home of citrus fruit is southern Asia, from the lower provinces of China to the slopes of the Himalaya mountains. Some 6,000 years ago travelers brought the "first golden apples" from India to Nippur, in Lower Mesopotamia and toward the sixth century the Jews returning from the Babylonian captivity, imported them to Palestine.

COLD WIND HALTS PEP IN TRAINING

Dempsey Wears a Flannel Shirt for Protection From Chilly Weather

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 3.—(AP)—A penetrating wind sweeping off the ocean took much of the dash and fire out of Jack Dempsey's work-out today. The weather was so chilly that Dempsey wore a half sleeved flannel shirt under his emerald green tights to protect him. The wind, however, did not prevent nearly 2,000 spectators from flocking to the Greyhound track.

Dempsey boxed five rounds with four partners, but it was evident that he decided to take things easy. He stalled through his work with his gloves, confining his attack to the body punching.

Jimmy DeForest, the gray haired veteran trainer appearing at the camp in the role of newspaper correspondent said Dempsey appeared to be in fairly good condition physically, but he was not impressed with his boxing.

"I believe Tunney is farther advanced in his training than Dempsey," DeForest said.

DeForest conditioned Dempsey when, as a youth of 23, Dempsey took the "heavyweight" championship from Jess Willard at Toledo in 1919.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Five miles on the road and nine holes of golf made up Gene Tunney's program today. He did no sparring as Lou Fink, his trainer, thought a full card of boxing arranged for Saturday and Sunday would be enough for the time being. At the solicitation of a dozen photographers, Tunney punched a bog for a few minutes this afternoon. Six rounds of sparring tomorrow and eight Sunday with the usual bag punching and shadow boxing will bring him back to work in earnest.

FAMOUS BATTLES for the HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE

Associated Press

By The Associated Press Sketch No. 4
Jim Jefferies knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons before a crowd of 10,000 at Coney Island in 11 rounds June 9, 1899. William S. Devery, police chief, was present to stop the bout "after the first hard blow."

Jefferies, manifestly in trouble in the seventh, came back to win with a left to the jaw, followed by a right.

The 37-year-old Fitzsimmons, opposing a juvenile of 22, tried to make it a short fight, realizing that his victory must come early in the game or not at all.

The contestants did not weigh in and when Fitzsimmons said he scaled 157 pounds, Jefferies announced his weight at 148. He was probably close to 212.

It was announced before the battle that the moving picture machine was in fine working order, and would prove a success.

"Kid" McCoy was disgusted with the whole performance, saying it lacked sense.

Interviewed after the bout, Jefferies declared: "I believe I am the best man in the world."

Chief Devery said after the 11 rounds that every thing was "all right."
