ennis Tournament Will Open Here On September 18

Tunney Fight, Orphan for Days, Brings Philadelphia Joy

ber 18, according to an announcement made yesterday. The first matches will be played Saturday.

This event has been held in Salem every year since it became a city of enough size to furnish competition. Last year Roy Okerberg, star University of Oregon tennis and basketball player, was winner, and the year before Ted Emmel of Willamette university copped the prize.

No women's events will be held this year, as not enough women are expected out to furnish competition. Men's doubles and men's singles will be the only events. It is hoped that enough will sign up to make 32 entries in the singles and 16 pairs in the doubles, as this will simplify the task for the schedule makers.

Drawings have not been made yet, but will be prepared so that the schedule of matches will be out in time to appear in Friday morning's Statesman. The matches will be arranged so that they can be played whenever the players have time. In the past considerable trouble arose because many of the players had [illegible] the

CHAS. J. DEAN, M.D., Inc.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The Dempsey-Tunney heavy-weight title battle slated to be held in the great Sesqui-Centennial stadium on September 23 was the orphan of the pugilistic world until Philadelphia welcomed it. Tex Rickard put it on the doorsteps of both Chicago and New York, but it was denied a home in either city for various reasons.

After being blocked in New York at first, Rickard was in the midst of negotiations to stage the fight in Chicago when a sudden switch in sentiment by the New York State Athletic Commission brought the promoter hurrying back to Gotham.

It seemed certain then that the Yankee Stadium would house the spectacle but when a final showdown came the license powers refused to give Dempsey a permit for the bout, holding that he was first obliged to meet Harry Wills. With only a month to go, Rickard suddenly shifted the battleground to Philadelphia after deciding not to press the issue further in New York or attempt to utilize his Jersey City stadium, Boyle's Thirty Acres.

In the light of the months of bickering, uncertainty and obstacles that figured in the situation, it would be difficult to imagine Rickard having any more difficult time trying to stage a heavyweight title match but he says he did. The first one he ever staged, the famous Jefferies-Johnson tilt in 1910, gave him more trouble than any other fight he ever promoted.

"That fight, you will recall originally was slated to be held in San Francisco," Rickard said. "They had a fight law there, everything seemed all set and I went ahead and invested something like $40,000 in erecting a wooden stadium. Then, without the slightest warning and only 30 days before the match was to come off, Governor Gillett said we couldn't hold it. I swallowed the big money loss, pulled up stakes and took the fight to Reno, Nevada."

Since then, however, Rickard has had comparatively smooth sailing in most of his ventures until this year's difficulties arose.

"Politics usually have been at the root of most of my troubles," said Rickard. "Somebody always wanted to have a finger in the pie."

"Reformers also have tried to block my plans on a number of occasions. I don't know why it is but the yalways pick on a heavyweight title fight as the one event in boxing to criticize and class as brutal. It must be because they're sure of receiving more publicity on such occasions than they would if they objected to a match attracting less public interest."

"Process servers who wait in ambush until the last minute also can be annoying," the promoter continued. "Dempsey may think he has been harried with law-suits but he isn't in a class with Firpo.

"The big Argentine was always being subjected to some court action and a summons in one of them was served on him only an hour before he was to step into the ring with Harry Wills at Boyle's Thirty Acres in 1924. I had to put up a $50,000 bond on the spot to keep him from being taken in jail and kept from going on with the fight."

FAMOUS BATTLES for the HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE

Associated Press

Bill Squires came all the way from Australia to be knocked out in the first round by Tommy Burns at Colma, Calif., July 4, 1907. Burns had gained recognition as the champion following the retirement of Jefferies.

The champion of Australia remained in an upright position in the ring only eight seconds over two minutes. Dispatches did not state his recumbent record.

Squires was flat on his back 10 seconds after the opening bell.

Unkind spectators suggested, when it was evident that Squires would be unable to take any further active part in the affair, that the formality of counting him out be waived by dragging him from the ring.

Jim Jefferies was the referee.

Eye-witnesses said that while it would be unkind to call the Australian champion a "dub" he was certainly a "false alarm."

There was nothing in the record to contradict this.

Although the going was not good, 9000 persons made the long trip to Colma.

WOOL STRONG

BOSTON, Sept. 13—(AP)—The market is strong for combing 70's wool. Grade of good length staple is scarce and price is frequently a minor consideration in a sale. In order to get a sufficient supply of 70's, buyers have taken 66-70's and even 64-70's, especially if of a good length staple. Reports of the strength of the sale in Australia at the opening and also the fact that these wools run slightly coarser this season, may have been an incentive for mills to buy more freely of spot foreign fine wool.

ANNA Q. NILSSON PLAY AT ELSINORE

Beards of All Colors and Types Imaginable Seen in "Miss Nobody"

Red beards, black beards, blue beards—in fact, beards of all colors and every imaginable shape—are to be seen in "Miss Nobody," the First National picture showing at the Elsinore theater last times today, featuring Anna Q. Nilsson.

During the screening of "Miss Nobody" the four leading male actors paid no attention to the growth of their beards, for they are seen as "hoboes." Measuring the growth was a daily pastime between the scenes.

Walter Pidgeon, leading man, held the record with a growth for two weeks of one and a half inches. Others in the bearded quartet are Clyde Cooke, well known comedian; Mitchell Lewis and Arthur Stone.

Several of the technicians and co-workers on the picture gave the quartet moral support by allowing their own beards to grow. Among those was Wid Gunning, editorial director, and Lambert Hillyer, the director.

In "Miss Nobody" Anna Q. Nilsson is seen in men's clothes. Naturally she doesn't wear whiskers. She is one of the very few who doesn't. Again in this picture Miss Nilsson wears the "Shebo" bob, which became so famous when she appeared in "Ponpola."

"Miss Nobody" is an adaptation of the celebrated story by Tiffany Wells, entitled "Shebo."
