We Asked
Dr. Morris Why He Liked His Job—

He replied: "I like my job, first of all, because of the unusual opportunity for service it renders. Few people realize how important a part vision plays in the everyday business of living.
"But when a person stops to realize how many of his pleasures and most means of livelihood are actually dependent upon his being able to see, and that clearly, one might well realize the value of flawless vision or corrective measures where sight is defective.
"Sight is truly the greatest boon to mankind, and therefore my job of aiding people to preserve and improve this great gift carries a sort of inner gratification with it that will not be denied."
