

County Displays Reveal Vast Oregon Resources

Outstanding Characteristic of Each Section Revealed in Exhibits Whose Number and Size Pass All Records in Recent Years

With the number and quality of county exhibits on display in the main pavilion passing anything known in recent years, interest yesterday centered on this section where even the casual newcomer could grasp at a glance the diversification and wealth of the state of Oregon.

All prizes will be awarded on a point system of scoring, as adopted by the board last year, with the result that each county has noted, many counties absent during the past years, are again present.

Under an illuminated sign, opposite one entrance, is the Marion county display.

William Taylor in charge of the Marion county booth at the state fair said yesterday that the first work on the exhibits started on May 23 and from the look of the various and diversified products of the county on display the work has been continuous from that time.

In arranging the exhibits for the booth it was the aim of Mr. Taylor to select those products for which Marion county can claim her greatest revenue.

The freshness of the produce on display in the Marion booth is one of the features that first attracts the attention of the visitors for even the grasses and clovers which were cut last spring have retained most of their original color.

The exhibit includes samples of various grains and the corn on display rivals any which might have been brought from the "corn belt" states.

Inasmuch as there is no competition among those exhibiting in the Marion county booth the exact list of those contributing has not been compiled and Mr. Taylor has selected the best samples of the many horticulture, grain, and vegetable products that could be produced. Excellent cooperation from the farmers in the county made the exhibit possible and much credit must be given to those producing such wonderful crops.

Inasmuch as there is no competition among those exhibiting in the Marion county booth the exact list of those contributing has not been compiled and Mr. Taylor has selected the best samples of the many horticulture, grain, and vegetable products that could be produced.

The corn grown on the farm of Gus Hyden averaged 50 to 110 bushels to the acre. This farm is located three miles south of Salem on the river road. Those who have seen the corn from this farm claim that Mr. Hyden is the "king corn raiser" of the Willamette valley.

Tomatoes grown on the farm of Oscar Stole near Stayton are unsurpassed for uniform size and quality. Canneries used most of Marion county's tomatoes this season.

Onions from the Hayes farm in the Lake Labish district form an attractive feature of the exhibit. Through the onion prices this year have been rather low, the farmers in this district have found a market because of the good quality and commercial size of the onions. A rather unusual angle of the onion industry in Oregon is the fact that California buys practically all her onion sets from the district near Hubbard. This year the average price obtained for the onion sets is five cents a pound.

Mint also grown in the Lake Labish region forms part of the exhibit and from the revenues resulting from that crop this season the county promises to become one of the chief producers of mint oil.

Five different kinds of filberts are on display and two of walnuts, Franquette and Mayette walnuts are the principal commercial crop grown here now.

Even residents of the county are surprised at the quality and the extent of the apple exhibit in connection with the Marion county booth. One apple grower from Yakima declared yesterday that he had never seen more perfect apples anywhere.

Mr. Taylor when asked what varieties were represented among the apple exhibits declared that it would take the balance of the afternoon to enumerate them but that all commercial kinds were represented. The banana apples looked so near perfect that they appeared to be made of wax. The apples this year have wonderful coloring which adds to the exhibit.

Five varieties of pears and the Commercial Book Store has everything you need in books and stationery and supplies for the school, office or home at the lowest possible prices.

The Pacific Book Store, 176 N. Commercial, has a large stock of books, stationery, and supplies for the school, office or home at the lowest possible prices.

U. A. Luby, Reliable Jewelry Store, What you are looking for in jewelry. Where a child can buy as safely as a man or woman. Repairing in all lines.

French and Italian prunes were also displayed.

Marion county can well be proud of her products to guests at the fair and it would be hard to find a more diversified collection of perfect crops that can be grown in one valley anywhere else in the world.

Mrs. Willie Braden, secretary of the Polk county fruit board, is in charge of the Polk county booth whose chief display is clover and clover seed and the various grasses which are grown in connection with dairying.

A unique feature of the display is an attractive pile of dried Italian prunes on which has been constructed a teeter-totter with a basket of prunes on one end and a small doll on the other. A placard on the exhibit states "high quality—low price."

Fiber flax, apples, and a great variety of home grown produce, canned principally for home consumption, forms much of the exhibit.

Mrs. Braden is to be complimented for the attractive manner in which she has arranged the products of her county.

One mammoth cheese weighing 453 pounds holds the center of the stage in the Tillamook county exhibit. Other cheeses of commercial sizes surround the giant cheese.

Cheese production in Tillamook county is one of the chief sources of revenue, according to W. D. Pine county agent, who stated that over two million dollars annually is realized from this product.

Thirteen thousand cows and 25 factories are necessary to produce and manufacture the product.

Stock beets weighing 30 pounds each also form part of the exhibit and according to Mr. Pine they are the largest in the fair.

Canned eastern plums and home canned produce form the balance of the exhibit.

Alfalfa grasses form part of the Klamath county exhibit and according to W. W. Lawrence, assistant county agent, these grasses feed many thousands of head of beef cattle, dairy cows, and sheep.

Wool from Klamath county brings one million a year revenue. Dairying is increasing greatly in Klamath county and many purebred calves are being purchased in Tillamook county to properly stock the Klamath dairy herds. Cheese is also produced as well and butter and other dairy products.

Lumber manufacturing is one of Klamath counties chief revenue producers and Mr. Lawrence said that the payroll of the 28 mills in Klamath Falls alone amounts to a million a month. The soil is ideal for many diversified products and now that proper rail connections have been established the county is looking forward to a great period of prosperity.

C. W. Daigh, county agent, is in charge of the Wasco county exhibit which features grains, fruits, and canned products.

The fruits are in excellent condition and peaches, apples, pears and cherries are shown.

Truck garden produce also shares a large part of the exhibit with many excellent canteloupes and similar product on display.

Two large pictures on the back wall of the exhibit portray the important sheep industry and the beautiful upper Columbia river scenery.

Canned goods prepared at the Libby and Stadelman canneries are shown with attractive labels.

Columbia county features dairy products in their exhibit and according to George W. Nelson this is one of the chief industries in the state. Butter is the most important dairy product with cheese second and top cream third.

Three large creameries operate in the county and two cheese factories.

Forage crops of all kinds are grown and wheat, oats, barley and rye in the grains.

Potatoes are produced in large quantities for marketing and many excellent specimens are on exhibition.

Strained honey and honey in the comb are also on exhibition and form one of the leading products of the county.

Fruits of all varieties including pears, grapes, strawberries and apples form part of the colorful display.

Vegetables are a minor industry in the county but many excellent jars of home canned vegetables and fruits are shown.

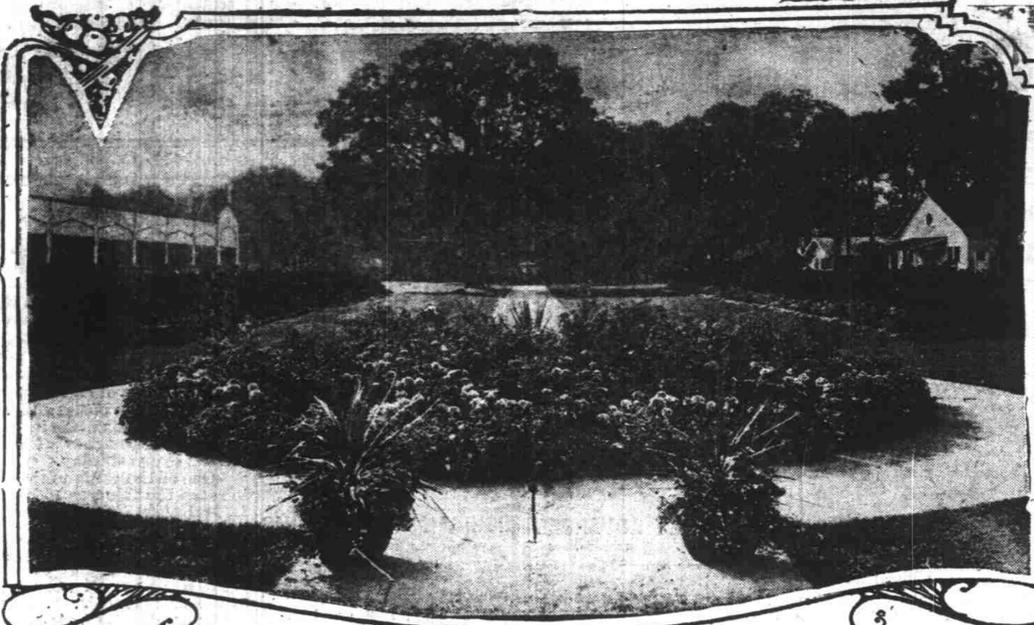

Filberts and walnuts also grow well in the county and much acreage is being planted to them.

Flax, hops, and fruit are the main features in the Marion county exhibit.

display, considered one of the best county exhibits at the state fair, and the best this county has ever put on. The display was arranged by W. A. Taylor, a veteran at the game.

The state hospital display consists of a giant basket of fruit weighing 200 pounds, containing pears, apples, peaches and grapes. Vegetables and grain are included in the exhibit, which is in charge of J. C. Simson.

Flax and linen are featured in the exhibits of the Miles Linen Mill and from the state penitentiary. The linen industry from the flax seed to finished cloth is shown in the combined displays.

The Mt. Angel community has an exhibit consisting of samples of practically every crop raised in Oregon, and of pictures of the ruins of the college.

A loom operated by a blind woman is a feature of the display of the Oregon employment institute for the blind at the state fair this week. Canning, basketry, and weaving of various kinds are displayed in the institute's exhibit.

This is the first year the institute has had an exhibit at the fair. It is located in Portland and gives employment all the time to 19 men, who turn out about 2400 chairs and nearly as many brooms every year.

Mrs. W. J. H. Clark is in charge of the display, assisted by Mrs. G. C. Sherman.

LOOKING THE FAIR OVER

Fall rains have put the fairgrounds in the most attractive condition in years, according to old timers who yesterday commented frequently on the improvements made by removal of old buildings and the erection of the new automotive pavilion, leaving as it does a green park, ample and expansive, about which the buildings cluster.

Early discussions in the stock section indicated that exhibitors hold the opinion that the state has outgrown its present animal display quarters and will, within a short time, be forced to erect new structures. Aside from this slight criticism, early arrivals had nothing but praise for this year's fair opening.

For the 11th time, Harry Cook, chief of police at Newport, and Mrs. Della E. Cook, his wife and a policeman, have charge at the fairgrounds. He declared last evening that not the slightest trouble had been experienced with the first day's crowd, and spent some time in spreading the news that all articles lost or found should be sent to the lost and found department, in connection with his headquarters. Approximately 25 officials, it is believed, will be under his supervision.

Careful traffic supervision marked yesterday's opening day with guards stationed to keep the cars moving in rows and enabling them to turn onto the main highway, without confusion.

John Smallman, a pioneer of 1851, born in Linn county, is nicely camped in Tent City. With him is his son-in-law, A. B. Baker, now of Portland, but formerly of Salem. He is still connected with the Hammond lumber company, however.

Members of the state fair board were seen moving around the grounds, yesterday, and being greeted by many old friends. The board consists of Henry Crawford, newly appointed, and A. C. Marsters, of Roseburg; F. E. Reynolds, La Grande; F. E. Lynn, Perrydale, and Horace Addis, of Portland. Mrs. Ella S. Wilson is secretary.

Inauguration of the racing program, yesterday, found the following officials listed: A. C. Marsters, superintendent of speed; C. E. Gates, presiding judge; J. D. Ferris, associate judge; G. J. Hodgins, associate judge; J. P. Bollen, jockey judge; J. D. Houston, starter; Bert F. Ives, clerk of the races and L. A. Westcott, clerk of course.

Miss Opal Hill, of Salem, in the information booth maintained by the Salem Ad club was kept busy yesterday answering questions and handing out pamphlets pertaining to Salem, its industry and agriculture.

at the state fair plant. O. M. Plumtree, manager of the Pacific International exposition, will preside at the banquet.

Today is Grange day at the state fair, and members of the organization will be in attendance from all sections of Oregon. The principal addresses will be given by George Palmier, master of the Oregon State Grange; Governor Pierce and C. H. Spence, state market agent. The grange this year has a booth at the state fair for the first time in the history of the organization.

The camping grounds at the fair were crowded to capacity yesterday and a call was sent out for more space. These grounds are in charge of Albert Tozier, custodian of Champeaux park and recognized by his friends as mayor of the tent city.

Among the prominent men who arrived at the fairgrounds yesterday were J. D. Farrell, superintendent of the Union Pacific lines with headquarters at Seattle, and E. L. King, superintendent of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon. Both officials arrived here aboard their private cars which will be parked near the fairgrounds until late in the week.

Members of the fair board, after a survey of the fair plant yesterday, said the exhibits were more numerous than ever before, while the entries in the racing events and night horse show far exceed in number those of previous years.

Policing of the fair grounds is under the direction of Harry Cook, chief of police at Newport, assisted by a number of detectives from Portland and other northwest cities.

The Eugene Radiators will spend Wednesday at the fair and will have charge of the ceremony attending the crowning of the winner of the Governor Pierce derby. A young Eugene matron has been selected for this honor.

EUGENE, Or., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Escorted by a group of Eugene Radiators, Altha Hendricks, Eugene girl, will represent that organization at the Salem state fair Wednesday and take part in a ceremony of crowning the winner of the annual derby race.

At a meeting of the Radiators today plans for the Salem visit were made and Frank Jenkins was appointed chairman of the committee to have charge of this special event.

As frost destroyed many of the flowers that were to have been displayed in the floral show at the state fair, some of the exhibits will be lacking and judging of the show has been postponed until today, where in times past it has always been done on Monday.

A big display of gladioli is one of the features of the show, in spite of the ravages of recent frost. Among the gladioli exhibitors are Arthur Perrin and L. E. Weeks of Salem.

General floral displays are offered by C. F. Brethaupt of this city and by Smith's floral shop of Portland. Weather conditions caused cancellation of exhibits by other firms.

Tommy Luke, in charge of the flower show, was in the East to attend a florists convention, but is expected to be present today for the judging.

BOYS-GIRLS CLUB SCORING FINISHED

Multnomah Takes First, Polk, Lincoln, Jackson, Clackamas Follow

Multnomah county boys' and girls' club placed first in the livestock judging at the fair late yesterday when they piled up a total of 1671 points. Polk county took second, Lincoln third, Jackson fourth and Clackamas fifth.

Members of the Multnomah county team were Floyd Stafford, Harold Dahl and John Fleming. Polk county had 1565 to take second, and Henry Morrow, Derril Hewitt and Dorothy Morrow composed the team. Lincoln county had 1553 points for third place, and Dot Steinmetz, William Stokes and Morris Johnson were members of the team. Jackson county took fourth with 1502 and Harold Head, James Lothrop and Howard Detrick were members of the team. Clackamas county had 1499 points and Roy Harms, Lord Gribble and Wilmer Harms composed the team.

High scoring individuals were: First, Harold Dahl, Multnomah, with 573; second, Wilmer Harms, Clackamas, 558, and third tied between Henry Morrow of Polk county and Floyd Stafford of Multnomah with 556 each.

terest being evinced since this group barred previous prize winners. Chiara, owned by F. A. Martin of Garden Home, won her first regular blue ribbon at last night's show. Oh Min, owned by Ed Spencer, was second.

Shikara, the beautiful black of which Mrs. C. Edward Grelle of Portland is the owner, and a consistent prize winner since 1921, won first in the ladies' five-gaited saddle horse event. Marguerite, an excellent performer from the stables of Aaron Frank of Portland, placed second. A third Portland horse, owned by Barbara Allen, also won a prize in this event.

Again three Portland horses were winners of an event when Natt McDougall's Tony Dundee, Aaron Frank's Courty Smith, and Leslie Kearns' Mildred Muller won first, second and fourth places respectively in a stiff contest between 17 ladies' hunters.

In the gentlemen's three-gaited haddle-horse class, still another Portland horse, Dapper Dan, owned by Mrs. Fred King, rated first.

The program of the evening closed with a single in harness event. Miss Catherine Quigley won first with "Pride," from Everett, Wash.

Only one rider was thrown at the hurdle during last evening's program, and that was without injury.
