Mrs. McPherson in the yard of the Benedict cottage at Carmel was not changed under cross-examination.

Testimony of six witnesses yesterday, several of whom District Attorney Asa Keyes admitted had been placed on the stand out of order so that they might return the virtually unparalleled case of the Angelus temple pastor.

A regiment of news writers, through whom Judge Blake has ruled the public will be represented because of the courtroom's limited space, were on hand early for the second act of the unusual court drama. The edict of the court, "one person in the courtroom for each seat," was strictly enforced and loitering about corridors was forbidden. Through a court room window on the seventh floor of Los Angeles' hall of justice, a large crowd could be seen at the entrance awaiting a glimpse of the four-square gospel leader.

A barrage of flashlight "booms" in the corridor announced the entry of the famous religious leader and her mother 10 minutes before the session was due to begin at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. McPherson looked fresh and apparently prepared for what the day might bring. She was dressed exactly the same as she was yesterday—plainly, in black silk with a white linen collar at the neck of her two piece dress. The wide brimmed black hat again hid her wreath of bronze colored hair by which witnesses yesterday declared they positively identified her as the "cottage woman" at Carmel-by-the-Sea, Cal., last May.

Ernest Renkert, fuel man of Carmel, Cal., resumed the stand for cross examination by W. L. Gilbert, chief of Mrs. McPherson's counsel. Renkert testified yesterday he had seen a woman at the so called Benedict cottage at Carmel while delivering wood last May whom he identified as Mrs. McPherson. Answering a question, Renkert said he had read in the newspapers about the disappearance of Mrs. McPherson at Ocean Park and say her picture prior to delivering wood to the cottage. The witness said he "believed" he had first read of the $25,000 reward offered for the evangelist's return a "week" after he first saw the woman.

Renkert admitted he had told Judge J. A. Bardin of Salinas, Cal. that the woman he saw at the Carmel cottage was a blond and that at the time he talked with Judge Bardin and a Mr. Lydig he knew that a reward had been offered for Mrs. McPherson's return from supposed kidnapers.

When Gilbert asked Renkert how he happened to notice the woman in the yard so particularly, he answered: "When I see a woman I look at her."

Mrs. McPherson and her mother laughed heartily. Gilbert's insistence on Renkert answering numerous questions as to whom he had discussed the matter with, drew strenuous objections from E. J. Dennison, deputy district attorney.

"There is a woman's name at stake here," said Gilbert, "and I want to find out to whom these witnesses have been talking." The objection was overruled and Gilbert continued his questions. Renkert told of discussing the woman he had seen at the cottage with several acquaintances at Carmel. He said he had met and talked with Joe Ryan, an investigator for Los Angeles, some time in July after Ryan had hunted him up at the woodyard.

At that time Gilbert sought to excuse the witness if the court would hold him for further questioning. Judge Blake overruled objection by Keyes and ruled that Renkert would remain in attendance on the court if Gilbert wished to excuse him.

Renkert left the stand and Wilson of Carmel was called.

He testified he was working on a house next to the Benedict cottage for three months commencing May 18. Asked whether he had seen Mrs. McPherson before she was pointed out in the courtroom, he said he could not say for sure he had seen her before.

He noticed a man and woman occupying the Benedict cottage for several days. The man, he said, was decidedly lame. He said he saw a bathing suit hanging on the line at the cottage but could not fix its color.

McMichael said he saw the woman at the cottage five or six times. McMichael remembered seeing an automobile in front of the cottage but said he could not describe it.

On cross examination McMichael said there was nothing about the couple at the cottage to arouse his suspicions. He thought they were newly married, he said. McMichael said the woman was blond, or nearly a blond, but did not have auburn hair. He was excused.

Shikara, the dethroned, was awarded second. Two Seattle horses, owned by Dr. E. J. Brown and Jack Holl of the Olympic club took the remaining awards.

Mrs. Ellery W. Stone (Helen West) of Oakland, California, won the blue ribbon with "Eye Opener" shown with a gleaming phaeton instead of the usual gig, in one of the most picturesque events of the evening, that for ladies' singles. Another horse of Mrs. Stone's, Lady Lofly, placed fourth. Ruxton, J. D. Farrell's handsome driving horse, won second place, while Seattle won another honor—third place—with a well-mannered Olympic club entry.

To add still further to the unusual success achieved by Portland horses, Miss Ethelred McElhinney added Kula Kula to the list of laurel winners when she was awarded first place for ladies' three-gaited saddle horses. Mrs. Fred Kink's Gay Lady took second place, while the remaining awards went to O. A. C.

Aaron M. Frank once more was king of the show when Nannette, one of the most beautiful mounts in his perfectly equipped stable, won first in the gentleman's three-gaited saddle horse group.

W. E. Culbertson won first prize for the best pair of ponies, with child driving.

A mounted drill by members of the Portland Hunt club, in scarlet and black habits, with Harry M. Kerron directing, closed the evening.

What Do You Understand by the Word REST?

Rest is the ability of one who is tired to sit down and relax with comfort. Of course a newspaper or magazine is the first thing a person desires so complete rest can be enjoyed. BUT—This cannot be accomplished if your eyes are weak and cannot help you. Have your eyes examined and get a pair of glasses, so that when you sit down in the evening to rest and read you may thoroughly enjoy it. Let Staples See to Your Sight.

MEXICAN CITY HIT BY STORM

Wires Break as Message Comes Telling of Heavy Seas Flooding Town

VERA CRUZ, Sept. 28.—(AP).—Vera Cruz has been swept by a hurricane, the most devastating since 1888.

Several ships were sunk in the bay and the Ward liner San Juan was partially wrecked.

With the great gale came heavy seas, which flooded the piers and drove out those living in that neighborhood, in fear of an inundation.

The hurricane blew for several hours, but about mid-day the wind began to fall and the storm swept overland.

The streets of Vera Cruz are littered with fallen trees, but thus far not many casualties are reported. There is no word as yet of damage in the interior.

In Vera Cruz harbor several tugs were sunk and warehouses and customs offices inundated. Much cargo destined for the United States was destroyed.

Traffic in Vera Cruz had to be suspended owing to the high water. Only small vehicles were permitted to pass through the streets. The authorities ordered the electric power services closed down owing to the tearing up of wires and the electrocution of several mules. It was feared that if the electric services were permitted to continue there would be fatalities among the public.

Telegraphic communication with Mexico City and other parts of the republic were severed during the storm and thus far it has been impossible to ascertain the damage done inland.

One of the special features in the Jersey barns is the exhibit of Pickard Bros. Included in their exhibit is Darlings Jolly Lassie record 1141 pounds of fat in one year. This is the highest Jersey record for any cow any age, living or dead. World's records in the cattle production have been so common in the west that no special attention is paid to the cows that are so distinguished and but few of the visitors realize that the greatest Jersey cow of the breed is quietly chewing her cud in one of the stalls at the fair.

The grand champion honor in the Jersey bull show was captured by the bull owned by Mrs. Edna Knight, Willows, Calif. The similar honor for the cows will not be decided until today.
