LOOKING THE FAIR OVER

Clinton M. DuBois, factory representative for the Durant Motor company of California, is assisting the Salem Automobile company with their display at the fair this week.

George Ashcraft, formerly manager of the Ashcraft Lumber company at Newport, is now the sales manager for the Exposition Motor Car company of Portland. Mr. Ashcraft is attending the fair with C. N. Smidt, owner, demonstrating the new Sterns-Knight automobile.

T. A. Pigott, wholesale representative for the Manley Auto company of Portland, is attending the fair, demonstrating the Chandler line for his company.

Lee Bryant, an authority on the sleeve valve type motor, lecturer and representative of the Willlys-Overland company, is at the fair telling the visitors about the Willys-Knight motor. Mr. Bryant has a cut-away motor which he is demonstrating with his lectures. He is in the booth occupied by the MacDonald Auto company, local dealers.

A library set of Oregon walnut, consisting of table and chairs, is one of the features of the deaf school's display at the state fair. It was made by inmates of the school under the direction of J. A. Carpenter. Many other pieces of furniture made by the students in their regular classwork are shown.

The girl students of the school have a complete exhibit of the work done in sewing classes there, including sets of dresses for women and girls, spreads, bedroom sets, and plain and fancy sewing work of all kinds. Seven of the girl students are present to show the sewing as taught in the school classes. Mrs. Sylvia Smith is in charge of the display.

More than 2300 birds are included in the poultry exhibit at the state fair, of which 1625 are chickens, and the rest are pigeons, bantams, ducks geese and turkeys. Barred Rocks have the biggest number among the chickens, 123, while Rhode Island Reds are second with 101. Ed Shearer of Estacada is in charge of the poultry department.

The poultry exhibit is one of the best ever held at the state fair it is said, and also one of the largest. The quarters are crowded to capacity. The turkey and geese exhibits are the largest ever held at the fair.

Judges of poultry are William Coats, Seattle; J. T. Peltier, Compton, Cal., and L. W. Weisenborn, Portland.

John E. Fehr of Indianapolis, Ind., nationally known authority on rabbit breeding, and author of several books on the subject, who is acting as judge of the rabbit exhibits at the state fair, will address a meeting of all rabbit breeders and others interested in rabbits at the chamber of commerce tonight at 8 o'clock. He will discuss the national rabbit situation from the standpoint of markets, breeding and furs.

Mr. Fehr has been making a tour of the northwest doing judging and similar work at fairs, and is making his first appearance in this city. The speech tonight is considered an excellent opportunity for rabbit fanciers to learn about the situation from a recognized authority.

Salem rabbit fanciers are expecting to organize soon, it was stated by F. H. Ziaser of this city, through whose efforts Mr. Fehr was brought to Salem. Harry Carter of Tacoma and H. O. Osborne of Portland are other rabbit authorities who will be present.

Plenty of excitement of the carnival variety is provided for fair visitors this year by the large assortment of amusement devices furnished by the W. F. Browning show, a Salem company. There are three merry-go-rounds, two ferris wheels, a giant swing that pulls people around in dizzy circles, all the old sideshow standbys, and other amusements.

The Missouri Mule tosses and bucks about a small board platform until the passengers begin to wonder if they will come out alive. It dances on its front wheels and then on its rear wheels and topples over backward until it stands on its rear end. It is called a mule, but labeled "Ford," so its parentage is doubtful.

The Merry Mix-up whirls a score of people at a time about in circles with little side flips that leave them breathless when the ride is ended.

J. C. Kluckner of Portland is in charge of the MWA cabin at the state fair this year.

The honeycombs have been exhibited at the state fair have been put under glass covers to protect them from raids made by bees from a nearby oak tree, who gathered in flocks attracted by the honey.

Most of the visitors at the state fair go to see the exhibits of the counties, the livestock and floral showings but yesterday one group visiting the fair could not see any of the state's best products in all forms and varieties and had to be aided in getting around the fair grounds.

The group was from the state school for the blind and was composed of about a dozen boys ranging in age from eight to about 12. The livestock offered the most appeal to the sightless boys and when the building where the horses are housed was reached, many of them wanted to stay right there and "see" them. Monster Perchon stallions who would not permit regular fair guests to come within reach were perfectly docile while the boys walked around them in their stalls. The boys had no fear of the big hoofs that could have trampled them to death. One young colt kept a number of them entertained for some time.

"they are so big and feel so nice." Visitors at the fair yesterday all stopped and looked and again when they entered the show pavilion and saw the draft horses of the Damascus company of Portland in stall side the Shetland ponies, extreme difference in size both the subject of much comment of those that passed. Photographers were busy taking pictures of the horses and attendant came down the aisle leading a horse that almost blocked the passage way. He was followed by a youngster of years leading a Shetland, those who work around horses a livelihood could not follow from smiling.
