NOT AS EASY AS IT LOOKS

Dr. Hector Macpherson, who was for fifteen years head of the department of economics and sociology at the Oregon Agricultural college, is out with a statement embodying a plan for the complete reorganization of all the machinery of the state government—

The abolition of our sixty-four boards and commissions and a number of elective officers; and the organization of their functions under nine departments; state, law, finance, public works, agriculture, commerce, labor and industry, public welfare, and education.

There is no doubt that such a reorganization is needed; no doubt that it would result in both increased efficiency and greater economy; much greater economy—

But the bringing about of this reorganization, making what would amount to a commission form of our state government, is not as easy a task as it looks. It has been tried before—

Several times. But it has been fought by many people, and it will be fiercely fought again. Dr. Macpherson seems to have given up everything else to take up this fight, and to carry it on.

He proposes to ask the next legislature to make the change, or to submit it to a vote of the people. The legislature could only submit it to a vote, any way, because it involves constitutional changes.

The plan of Dr. Macpherson calls for the appointment of all the heads of the nine departments by the governor by and with the approval of the senate—

Excepting the last one named. The department of education would be elected by the people, under the Macpherson plan.

The writer is no prophet; but he is willing to hazard the prediction that this plan, or any plan of complete reorganization of the Oregon state government, will need several hot campaigns, covering a number of years, to put it over.

WILL THE SUGAR FACTORY BE HERE?

The proposed beet sugar factory, to be built by the Utah-Idaho Sugar company in case the farmers of the Willamette valley will contract to grow 8000 acres of sugar beets, and show that they have the kind of land with which they can make sugar beets a profitable crop, is presumably to be in Salem—

Because the negotiations have been carried on through the Salem Chamber of Commerce; because the greatest interest in the matter has been exhibited here; because experimental plots have been grown here for two years, the results of which were satisfactory—giving in every case indications of a product with a satisfactory commercial percentage of sucrose (sugar), and in some cases a reasonably high percentage—

And also indicating a per acre tonnage high enough to make sugar beets a profitable crop for the farmers—

To say nothing of the $20 an acre value of beet tops in feeding dairy cows, and the advantage of having beet pulp and molasses for feeding to live stock, especially to swine and poultry—

Because of all these things, Salem would seem to have the preference for the location of the first beet sugar factory in the Willamette valley.

But these things do not make the location of the factory a foregone conclusion.

Why? Because all the farmers of the valley will be on an equality, for the company will pay the freight on the beets within a sixty mile radius—

So Eugene or Albany or Corvallis or McMinnville or Forest Grove or Hillsboro, or some other valley city may get the first factory, if the farmers of the surrounding country shall take up and push the matter of getting contracts; and succeed in their efforts beyond those of the section immediately surrounding Salem.

So this is going to be a race for contracts— And the people of Salem, and their farmer friends, must take due notice and make the race a swift one, and let no grass grow under their feet.

Here is a chance for a beet sugar factory for the Willamette valley, to be ready for the 1927 crop. But the factory will go where it is wanted—

Where the farmers want it.

The growers have the first say. They must furnish the raw materials. That is the all important thing. The Utah-Idaho people will of course not begin to build a factory till the raw supply is assured; and assured in such manner as to make the supply safe for a long period of years—for an indefinite time.

Are we ready for the race?

Every year hereafter— Salem day will be the big day at the state fair.

The fair has become so great an attraction, and with so fine a plant that it will be a success every year, rain or shine; though fair weather will augment the crowds.

Salem is going to be very well equipped with theaters. But there will not be too many for long, if at all. The new people who will work in and about and getting out raw materials for the Salem paper mill, with those dependent upon them, will be enough to support such a theater as a town of 2500 has. There will be 500 new employees and counting five to the family, 2500 of them. To say nothing of many others indirectly brought here. Then there is the new linen mill, and many other things employing labor, just around the corner.

The Elsinore showed yesterday and will show today, in the Pathe news, the Ponck plane in its fatal crash. The moving picture man was on the ground, and it so happened that he was working his machine when the crash came, and got it all. An unusual thing, and a wonderful picture. Also first-ree pictures of the Florida hurricane.

The Rankin company will show and fly, all day today, from 9 o'clock till dark, its real safe airplane, at the fair grounds. Mr. Rankin wants everybody to go out to the grounds and take the children. He has children of his own at home.

All of the county displays at the state fair were good; better than ever before. This goes for Marion county's display, and then some. Bill Taylor, as usual, was the presiding genius, as he has been for many years, besides representing Oregon at most world's fairs for a long, long time.

All judging and competition closed yesterday noon with the completion of the girls canning contest. Most of the boys and girls club members who had come for the week began leaving immediately.

Pavilions and barns will soon pass into quiet and repose that will continue for another year until the hordes begin arriving for the 1927 fair.

FORD BEATS WARSHIPS INTO TRACTORS, TOOLS

cel of these one time ocean going vessels is found some place in the Ford organization.

Acetylene torches burn out the bulks into huge slabs of metal which is loaded for the foundry or open hearth steel for melting and the ship is no more. The process is continuous and as fast as one ship passes position number 1, another takes its place.

Whether the Ford organization will realize a financial gain on the project is still problematical but representatives of the company in an interview with The Associated Press pointed out that the venture was undertaken more in the nature of an experiment than with the idea of realizing financial gain.

only in a more or less run-down condition, but it is far inadequate for the carrying on of a full program of Salvation Army activities.

"Public gospel services are held four nights the week, and Sunday has its full program of several meetings. A growing Sunday school work reaches, in the main, a class which have no church in particular, both children and the grown-ups. Once a week a private class is held for a certain grade of young people between 12 and 18 years of age.

"Meetings are also held in the various state institutions, in conformity with a schedule that includes the different evangelical churches of the city. The Christmas season is no doubt the busiest of all for the Salvation Army, and it is then that the heaviest burdens are imposed upon its workers. Suffice to say that every Army community is acquainted with the large amount of good that is done by means of the Christmas dinner basket and the Christmas tree, both for poor families and their children.

"Under its present leaders, the Salem corps has enjoyed a successful year's work. There has been a hearty cooperation between the Army and other evangelical bodies, as was evident last winter in special Saturday night programs. Ensign Pitt credits the local ministers with having done untold good in a place where the opportunities for doing good are many and varied.

"Last, but not least, is the following committee, which serves the local organization in an advisory capacity: Dr. B. F. Pound, chairman; Mrs. F. A. Elliott, vice chairman; A. Smither, treasurer; Mrs. Gertrude J. M. Page, F. G. Delano, Frank Bligh, Roy H. Wasmam, A. Kreuse and J. M. Rupert. It is this committee that is backing the Army in its local annual

ENGLISH BISHOP PUZZLED OVER PARTY DISTINCTION

POLITICAL ISSUES IN THIS COUNTRY RAFFLING

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 2.—(AP)—The question as to the difference between the democratic and the republican parties is still puzzling the Right Honorable and Right Reverend Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, D. D. and his visit to Iowa thus far has not helped him any.

An explanation of the present Iowa political fight for a seat in the United States senate between Smith W. Brockhart, republican, and Claude R. Porter, democrat, as given by Parley Sheldon, his Ames, Iowa, host, did not serve to clear the point for the bishop.

"Ever since I came to this country, I have been trying to find out the distinction," the bishop good humoredly complained, "but when I came to Iowa I became more puzzled than ever."

"In England, there is all the difference in the world between the political issues of the liberals

BARRISTERS OF OREGON CLOSE TWO DAY SESSION

LAWYERS LEARN "WHAT WAS WRONG WITH THEM"

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 2.—(AP)—The two day session of the Oregon bar association closed here tonight after a full day in which the lawyers of the state learned "what was wrong with them" from a business man's point of view.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana declared the proposed uniformity of federal court procedure impractical, and elected W. Lair Thompson of Portland their new chief.

With the election of Mr. Thompson as president came the election by unanimous acclamation of all candidates by the nominating committee. Vice presidents elected are: G. F. Skipworth, Eugene, second judicial district; Percy R. Kelly, third judicial district; Louis P. Hewitt, Portland, fourth judicial district and the presiding judge in each of the other judicial districts.

John Guy Wilson and Arthur D. Platt were retained, respectively as secretary and treasurer. The executive committee elected includes O. S. Blanchard, Grants Pass; Arthur Clark, Corvallis; William G. Hale, Eugene; Charles Hart and W. L. Brewster, Portland. Bend extended the only invitation for the next annual convention and was virtually promised the meeting by unofficial sentiment among the new executive committee.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(AP) Further investigation into the possibility that life can exist on the planet Mars will be undertaken this winter by Dr. W. W. Coblentz at the Lowell observatory, near Flagstaff, Arizona.

He has left the capital for that place equipped with the latest model of heat measuring instruments which enable close calculations of the actual surface temperatures on the planet. Although Mars is forty million miles distant the instruments are said to distinguish between night and day temperatures, and between temperatures at different localities at the same time.

Dr. Coblentz first attacked the problem about two years ago and reported that noonday temperatures in certain Martian dark areas had at the same time temperature ranging from 14 to 41 degrees. The dark spots are believed to denote spaces covered with vegetation, while the light ones are tentatively described as desert plateaus. During the winter at the Martian north pole, the temperature was fairly constant at 94 degrees below zero.

The basis of the instrument used in measuring the Martian heat is the thermocouple, a welding where two different metals join. When the thermocouple is exposed to the radiated heat from Mars, infinitesimal as this energy is, there arises through the welding a slight electric current, the variation of which can be measured. From this phenomenon Dr. Coblentz has been enabled to make his calculations as to the probable temperature of the heat source to which the instrument points.
