

PAPER MACHINES ARRIVE AT MILL

New Unit Will Give Plant
More Than Double Present Daily Capacity

With 143,000 pounds of new machinery ready for installation, the new plant of the Oregon Pulp & Paper company recently completed on South Commercial street is expected to be running at full capacity by January or February.

The new machinery arrived yesterday and will be installed in the new annex as rapidly as possible. It consists of an entire paper-making machine and additions and new parts for the company's three machines already in operation.

The new machine to be installed will turn out a strip of paper 136 inches wide. Those now in operation turn out strips with widths of 136, 116 and 100 inches.

The new machinery will give the company's plant a capacity more than twice its present one, officials of the company say. At present about 50 tons a day are produced, and a production of between 110 and 120 tons a day is expected with the new equipment in place. The payroll of the mill will be increased from $35,000 per month to $60,000.

CHURCH ROW TAKES NEW COURT ANGLE

Director of Four Square Gospel Church Sued for Damages by Debell

ROSEBURG, Oct. 7.—(AP)—The Canyonville church row took a new angle today when Arthur L. Dubell filed suit for $2350 damages against A. M. Shaffer, pastor of the Four-Square Gospel church and mayor of the town of Canyonville, and Charles Bartley and Mark E. Elliott, leading members of the church of which Mr. Shaffer is minister.

Dubell was stabbed in the back Sunday, August 1, during a free-for-all fight which marked the close of a tent revival meeting which the preacher-mayor had been conducting.

In his complaint filed in the circuit court today he charged that the defendants conspired to set upon him, and while pinioning him and holding him helpless did assault, strike and beat and stab "him nearly into unconsciousness, beating him to the ground, kicking him in the head and stabbing him in the back with a knife."

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

Mrs. Sara A. Conboy
In a speech to the inmates of the New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford recently, Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, of New York City, gave her hearty indorsement to a new plan of wage payments to the inmates who are working in the garment industry.

Mrs. Conboy is international secretary treasurer of the United Textile Workers of America and a member of the board of directors of the national committee on prisons and prison labor.

"Wages for the inmates of correctional institutions is not new," said Mrs. Conboy. "For thirty years wages have been required to be paid by the basic law of New York state, and the principle has been in operation in France for 100 years. Wage payments to the inmates of a reformatory for women are not new either. The Minnesota reformatory for women for the past five years has given wages even to those carrying on the maintenance work of the institution.

"The industry in the Massachusetts reformatory for women is on a trade basis and has been a power for good in the institution for many years, but the law of Massachusetts does not allow the payment of any wages to the inmates of penal or reformatory institutions.

"At Bedford the standards of outside industry and wage payments are combined for the first time in an institution for women. "The garment industry is vitally interested in this experiment which is operated on the 'state use' basis, because it is a transfer of work formerly done in men's institutions to a women's institution, where it rightly belongs. The placing of the garment industry in women's institutions will drive it out of the institutions for men, where it has been in operation for many years under the contract system with disastrous effect upon the prisoner and the free worker. The girls trained in the garment industry can find work upon release, men cannot, for the industry is almost entirely operated by women.

"The experiment at Bedford is part of a survey of industries suitable for women prisoners which is being made by the committee on care and training of delinquent women and girls of the national committee on prisons and prison labor."

Mrs. Conboy was elected to the secretary treasurership of the United Textile Workers of America in 1915. She was one of five women selected by President Wilson and only woman representing labor at Mr. Wilson's conference in 1918. She represented the American Federation of Labor at the British trades congress in England in 1920—the only woman ever elected to that position; is chairman of the advisory board on vocational training in the public schools of New York and a member of the New York state housing committee. Mrs. Conboy was also one of the four women selected by President Harding for the unemployment conference in Washington in 1921. She was born and educated in Boston.

WILL-O'-THE-WISP!

Once upon a time there lived a Princess so beautiful that the fame of her grace and charm had spread even unto the farthestmost kingdoms. One sad day, as 'twas foretold, the Princess Beautiful pricked her finger with a needle, and straightway fell asleep. And the Princess slept for many years until Prince Charming rode her way and awakened her with a kiss.

"And the Princess and the Princess lived happily ever after!"
A very joyous ending for a very pretty story—in the time of fairies.

Today the world is no longer in its happy-go-lucky adolescence. Life is real and life is earnest, and it takes something less ephemeral than a kiss upon which to safely found so mighty an institution as marriage.

Marital happiness is decidedly will-o'-the-wispish. At that second it seems most surely to be safe within one's grasp—puff! off it flits across love's moors, and we who desire its capture must redouble our efforts or it is gone forever.

Whether the Great Adventure shall bring us weal or woe is largely determined by the spirit in which we set about pursuing this will-o'-the-wisp.

If we seek happiness for ourself alone it is likely to elude us.

If we wish to win it to share it with another it is apt to prove not so elusive.

And there is none so foolish as we who, having sought for and found marital happiness, make no attempt to hold it.

To have and to lose, the saddest of all sad fates—

A fate that overtakes many of us because we like the Sleeping Beauty trust too implicitly in the potency of kisses.

Such stuff as dreams are made of—this is the romance of marriage.

But after the witching honeymoon comes reality, inevitable, commonplace.

To vitalize every day living with interest, contentment, beauty is no one mate's job. It is a task that the Prince and the Princess needs must tackle together.

Faith and loyalty—with these the Prince and the Princess erect a barrier against jealousy and criticism.

Understanding and sympathy—and through the portals of the Prince and Princess intolerance can not pass.

Courage—and whatever crises comes they are safely tided over.

Co-operation and the spirit of give and take—this is the alchemy by which two personalities retain their own individuality, and are yet blended into perfect partnership.

Love and marriage and love—the Happy Ending that no longer follows, fairy-tale fashion, as a matter of course, but that the Prince and Princess attain only by concentrated effort, selfish devotion, intrepid hearts.

KELLY HANDS DOWN OPINION ON SUIT

Proof of Collusive Agreement Between Driver and Owner Lacking

Zadoc Riggs did not enter into a collusive agreement with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Janet Waller, as claimed by an insurance company from which Mrs. Waller has been trying to collect insurance money as a result of a wreck. It was held by Percy Kelly, circuit judge, yesterday.

The insurance company claimed that Mrs. Waller had entered into a contract with Riggs to sue him to collect the damages from the insurance company. Riggs had been driving the car at the time of the accident.

Judge Kelly held, however, that the agreement between Mrs. Waller and Riggs was not such as to furnish cooperation or assistance to the insurance company.
