IS THE JOB HIS FOR KEEPS?

(Eugene Guard.)

Is Charles L. McNary a United States senator by divine right? Is he supremely anointed? Has he preempted the office which he holds for another term or for life? Does a resolve by any voter or group of voters to vote for somebody other than he in the election of 1930 constitute treason against the flag or conspiracy against the public well being? Is it wicked to hold the thought that someone else might entertain saner and sounder ideas on such political subjects, say, as farm legislation than he? Is the McNary record so far above criticism or reproach as to entitle the senator to keep the seat he holds forever or until death doth part it and him?

If the answer to all these questions is yes, then the Portland Journal is quite right in its shriekings and its moanings because of a tell plot which it thinks it has discovered, on the part of a group of prominent republicans, to support the candidacy of somebody else against the senator four years hence. If the answer to these questions is yes, then the charge which the Journal says is made by A. E. Clark that somebody will run against Senator McNary is a serious charge. If the answer is not yes, then the whole clamor is piffle and the great hullabaloo raised by the Journal is quite senseless except as political buncombe. It is not yet illegal in Oregon either to oppose the re-candidacy of an office-holder or to give support to a candidate opposing an office-holder.

It is not difficult to understand why organization republicans may have lost some of their enthusiasm for Senator McNary. He has lined up as an opponent of the administration about as often as he has supported it. He is known in Washington variously as an independent, a progressive or a radical senator. He has persisted in trying to force through his paternalistic bill for a government bonus on farm products, and he has just announced that he will resume the effort in the next congress. One sees his name coupled with that of the radical LaFollette in the promotion of some new legislation. None of these things is calculated to strengthen him with the administration or with supporters of the administration or with republicans generally who are close to the party organization. Why, then, should there be surprise if a more orthodox republican comes out against Senator McNary or if such an opponent receives support from party leaders of the organization school?

The above questions from the Eugene Guard, however cynically designed and inspired, are fair questions. Here are the answers, given without the knowledge or consent of Charles L. McNary or his friends:

No, he is not a United States senator by divine right; he has not preempted the office for another term or for life; nor does a resolve by any voter or group of voters to vote for somebody other than him at the 1930 election constitute treason or conspiracy—

For this is a free country, and, especially in Oregon, it is not only lawful but quite the fashion for all sorts and conditions of self-starters to run for office.

But the writer will say that the candidates who enter the primary election against Chas. L. McNary, in case he shall decide to run, will know they have been in a race; and the same will hold true of the Democratic candidate.

If it is radical to offer a scheme of farm relief that will work, then Senator McNary is a radical—

But so are the great majority of the farmers of the United States, and they will vote almost in a body for candidates who stand with Senator McNary. There have been many schemes for farm relief offered, but not one of them gives or will give the relief that the farmers of this country ask for—

With the exception of the McNary (or McNary and Haugen) bill, in the opinion of the farmers of this country.

They know the McNary bill does not offer a bonus to the farmers, nor is it paternalistic, any more than any law authorizing companies or associations to organize and carry on their business. It merely offers 100 per cent cooperation to any group of producers of a major crop with an exportable surplus—

And the producers pay the cost.

Any candidate of either or any party in this country, from now on, and perhaps for several years, who runs counter to this demand for the real relief of the farmers of this country is going to have very hard sledding.

Still, this is a free country, and any one who thinks he would enjoy the exercise is at perfect liberty to plan to enter the political arena in 1930, or any other year.

THE LOGANBERRY AS A MEDICINE

D. A. White, well known Salem seedsman and property holder, came to the Statesman office yesterday to say he was sorry he overlooked the date of the annual loganberry Slogan number, which was yesterday—

Because he recently traveled two days with a man who had just spent two months in the great Battle Creek sanitarium, Battle Creek, Mich., recovering from a general breakdown—

And the tonic that contributed most to his recovery was loganberry juice. He said the Battle Creek sanitarium uses a great deal of loganberry juice; that they have substituted it almost exclusively for grape juice in helping to health their many thousands of patients who pass through their institution each year.

This man told Mr. White that the people of the Salem district do not know what a great thing they have in their loganberry industry, and that the biggest end of it may become the juice outlet in marketing this, the world's greatest bush fruit.

The makers of Phez loganberry juice used to advertise their product for the sick room as a tonic, relieving exhaustion; also good for sore throats; good for stomach disorders; rheumatism, indigestion; good for that tired feeling—

Both a food and drink, and a medicine.

It is well known that loganberries carry a larger percentage of iodine than any other fruit, and therefore its use in the dietary prevents goiter.

Now come the manufacturers of Prun Port and tell us that they plan to use 40,000,000 pounds annually of our Italian prunes, especially the small sizes and culls and splits.

Who knows what gigantic industries in prune and loganberry growing we may yet develop, through the juice outlets?

Bits For Breakfast

The prune jokes—

You have heard them all—

About being full of prunes, about the boarding house prune, about prune juice (meaning moonshine), and about the young lady who is a prune—

But now come the makers of Prun-Port, which is prune juice with a college education and a chemist's sheepskin, and tell us they propose to use 40,000,000 pounds of prunes a year of our dried Italian prunes in making their product; that would bring small sizes; that would bring back prune prosperity to our valley; would take our prune growers out of the slough of despond and make them purse proud prune plutocrats.

It is also learned that the Battle Creek, Mich., sanitarium, one of the biggest in the world, is using great quantities of loganberry juice in curing their patients. So our juice industries may cut coupons of juicy financial melons in the future, beyond our fondest dreams of yore.

The Volga Boatman is to be at the Oregon theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. It is one of the greatest pictures ever made; teaches one of the greatest lessons ever put on the screen.

On Saturday and Sunday the Elsinore will have Rudolph's last and greatest picture, "Son of a Sheik."

Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, the new president of the University of Oregon, stopped over in Salem yesterday and met a number of state officials and prominent citizens. He made a very favorable impression in Salem. He is detest-
