

PRIZE IS OFFERED FOR WOODEN HOUSE

Seattle Lumberman to Give $2500 for Home Built of Northwest Wood

SEATTLE, Washington, October 15.—A prize of $2,500 is offered by C. W. Stimson, Seattle lumberman, for an all wood home design which will best present the possibilities of woods native to the Pacific northwest. Mr. Stimson has offered this prize through the West Coast Lumber Trade Extension Bureau of this city. It is to be awarded in a nation wide contest open to all interested persons. The contest will begin next January and close July 1, 1927. Other prizes in proportion, the Bureau stated, will be made available.

"This prize," Mr. Stimson said today, "is offered to bring out ideas. I have no idea what kind of a design will result and I do not much care. I want to emphasize the beauty and the permanence in the oldest and most artistic building material we have—wood.

"Few of us realize," he continued, "that building in wood is the oldest form of construction known. It antedates history. There are pagodas and temples in the Orient built from wood that are among the oldest structures on earth and these are still the marvel of the engineer, the architect, and the artist. In construction, use of wood, and in beauty. Our beautiful new Fifth Avenue theater here in Seattle is a good example of the architecture of the Orient, centuries old, which grew largely out of a proper knowledge and use of wood.

"Throughout the hill country of central and northern Europe, the American traveler today finds old homes of the Swiss chalet type, clinging to the mountainsides, sturdily holding their own against the weight of heavy winter snows and crashing avalanches. These are built of wood because wood is the most durable and the strongest material for the conditions.

"Gothic architecture, found in its original purity in the beautiful old cathedrals of northern Europe, was at the start but a reproduction of the trees in nearby forests. The tree, first the home and wood, the ideal from which the early architect got his inspiration for the structure, also gave the craftsman his building material. Somehow I wish that an American architect, artist or handcraftsman would translate the wonderful trees of our Pacific northwest into a type of home distinctive of our forests. That is what the first Gothic architect did. It may be done again.

"The contest is intended to bring the use of wood, particularly west coast woods, to the close attention of those who design or who build homes. We have here in western Washington and Oregon trees from which an Oriental pagoda or a Gothic cathedral or a beautiful modern home may be built. We have also the finest softwoods for interior finish known today to man. Ours is the only region in which timbers are available of the size and length we can readily supply and in the wide, clear pieces we can easily produce. I believe that popular and technical interest in our western forests will produce some very worth while specimens of architecture. This is the reason for offering the prize.

The contest will be conducted, the Bureau stated, under the competition code of the American Institute of Architects. The conditions will be as follows:

1. The prize is offered for the design of a dwelling of wood, with broad latitude in size and cost.
 2. It must be based on the use of woods native to the Pacific northwest.
 3. It must develop the unusual possibilities of Pacific northwest woods.
 4. Conventional style will not be considered as important and the greatest leeway will be allowed in this respect.

some payments endorsed on the back of it and ask him to determine the amount still due on it, you might as well ask him to translate the Iliad in the original Greek," the Roseburg man asserted.

Meagre applause which followed the conclusion of Senator Eddy's talk came from a small group of men. Women composed approximately two thirds of the attendance, which reached 150.

Following Senator Eddy's report, Professor Alden invited open discussion of the matter, declaring that "whatever you as educators think, it must be remembered that the laymen help pay the bill, and they will have something to say about how it is spent."

Superintendent Rice of the Portland public schools called attention to the fact that most of the subjects upon which Senator Eddy would have stress laid are elementary school subjects, and he questioned the placing of blame on the high schools.

R. R. Turner, state superintendent of public instruction, characterized Mr. Eddy's talk as "an extravagant picture." School people are best fitted to wrestle with the problem of school curricula, he declared.

Dr. De Busk of the University of Oregon, head of the research department of the Portland public schools, declared that the problems brought up by Senator Eddy were matters of long controversy in the educational field and that there is an abundance of material to be found in them.

"You can't settle problems by counting noses and that is all that hearings amount to," he asserted. "Before trying to apply any remedy, the thing to do is to find out exactly what is wrong."

KNIGHT MEMORIAL CHURCH DEDICATED

1913. It was located on a beautiful five-acre tract a few blocks from the state fair grounds.

This pioneer pastor possessed an impressive personality. He was both pilot and product of early days of Oregon development. From the universally fine testimonials of those who knew him best there are many characteristics influential in shaping worthily the lives and destinies of his and future generations.

It is evident that he filled a vital, commanding place in the early civic, social and religious life of the Salem community; that probably no other person had a larger circle of devoted friends, that no sacrifices in the development of his ideas and ideals was sufficient to turn him aside from them.

He was a deep student, well versed in the classics. An enthusiast for Greek, he quoted it with obvious frequency in all his sermons. Nevertheless he steadfastly preached and emphasized the simple gospel truth. It is said that he officiated at more funerals and performed more marriages than any other local pastor of his time.

APARTMENT HOUSES BEING CONSTRUCTED

Two New Buildings Represent Total Investment of Over $150,000

Two new apartment houses, representing a total investment of more than $150,000 are rising rapidly on North Summer street between Marion and Union. One, being built by J. C. Meyers of Portland, is on the east side of the street in the middle of the block. The other, on the west side at the corner of Union, is being erected by S. E. Henderson.

The Meyers apartment house, which is being built in the shape of the letter U, with the top facing the street, is more nearly complete than the other. The framework is all built, and most of the window frames are in place. Some of the brick facing has been laid on the first story.

Part of the plumbing work has been done, and much of the pipe and fixtures to be installed has already arrived on the grounds. Masons and bricklayers are working on the brick facing each day.

The Henderson apartment house, which was started about a week ago, is also rising at a fast pace. Carpenters have been at work continually, with the result that the basement is finished, the foundation laid, and the framework of the building is in place.

AN ATTEMPTED ROBBERY

CASHIER REFUSES TO OPEN REGISTER FOR MAN

An attempted robbery of the cash register at the McDonald Auto company last night is believed to have been frustrated by timely arrival of a customer. The alleged robber was attempting to compel Mrs. Estella Winman, cashier, to open the register. According to accounts received at police headquarters, the man, shabbily dressed and with several days beard, approached Mrs. Winman with a check he wished cashed. Mrs. Winman refused and the man became abusive, demanding that she open the cash register. She stood her ground, however, and the arrival of the third party scared the man off.
