

LEWIS GRID TEAM HIT BY INJURIES

Regulars Kept on Sidelines; May Not Start Against Corvallis.

Salem high school's chances to win the football game against Corvallis high school on Saturday will be considerably lessened by the possible loss of four string players through injuries. In spite of this, the team in the best of spirits and is resolved to make a battle out of the game.

Olinger, end, is laid up with an injured knee, as is East, guard. Middleback, dropkicker and punter, has a case of water on the knee, while Homer Lyons, center, is an injured knee.

The rest of the men are in their best condition of the season, however, and the second team has given promise of ability in recent practice sessions. In 10 minutes play against Parrish junior high school they managed to pile up five touchdowns.

Out of the four injured men, all are expected to start the game except possibly Olinger. How long they will last, however, is a matter of conjecture.

The Corvallis high school team this year is reported to be a strong one, in spite of an early season loss to The Dalles. The line averages 11 pounds more per man than the Salem forward wall, while the backfield has plenty of speed. The team also boasts of one of the best kickers in the Willamette valley. The local team is anxious to win the game, as a victory over Corvallis will leave Eugene high school as the only obstacle between Salem and the Willamette valley championship.

Two other games besides the Corvallis and Eugene contests remain on the Salem schedule. They are against Hillsboro and The Dalles.

Tentative arrangements have been made for a Thanksgiving day game here between Salem and Commerce high school of Portland. The Commerce management has sent word that the team will come here provided the schedule can be arranged to permit it.

INJURIES HAMPER BEARCAT WORKOUT

Special Train to Carry Students to Forest Grove for Annual Battle.

The continual string of injuries and illness that has followed the Willamette university football team all through the present season is not letting up any, reports Coach Spec Keene. About eight of his men are not expected to be in condition to start the Pacific game.

The latest additions to the Bearcats' hospital list are Bennett, halfback, who has several boils, McKenzie, Mort, Propp, Best, and Schofield guards, who are all out with either injured ankles or shoulders. Crisner, end, who has an injured shoulder, and Hartley, tackle, who has an infected finger.

Out of this list, Hartley is the only one who has much chance of appearing in the lineup against Pacific.

Practically all the guards on the squad are included on the list of injuries, so Keene has quite a problem in determining who can play in this position Saturday. Someone may have to be shifted out of their regular positions to fill the holes.

A large number of students have signed up for a special train that will leave Salem Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock for Forest Grove, where the game will be played.

STANFORD ELEVEN CONFIDENT OF WIN

Cardinals Board Train Los Angeles to Meet Trojans Saturday.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal. Oct. 28.—(AP)—It was a confident band of Cardinals that headed south tonight for their game Saturday with the Trojans of the University of Southern California. Every man on the Stanford squad was of the same mind, that is, they will return victorious from the Los Angeles encounter.

A year ago the Cardinals were slated for defeat by most football critics, but when the game was a matter of history the score board read: Stanford 13; U. S. C. 9. This fact, coupled with an increasing strength, has given the red-shirt team an assurance that even knowledge that Southern California has one of the most powerful defenses in its history cannot overcome.

Coach Pop Warner has worked out a defensive formation which Stanford supporters believe will cause the Trojans no end of worry. In addition, he has a galaxy of backfield stars working favorably to that of U. S. C.

TWO COLLEGE LEADERS TALK BEFORE TEACHERS

Identified by Mrs. Louis Dodge of Ashland, state vice president.

If resolutions which will come before the house this morning are adopted, the next state convention will not be until 1928. If the resolution to make the state conference biennial is accepted, district conventions on alternate years will be automatically provided. Due to the pressure of business yesterday the election of the state treasurer was deferred until today.

Yesterday afternoon, in order to alternate social and business aspects, the Salem Woman's club entertained the convention delegates at tea.

Momentum was added to the free text book agitation, which is one of the leading legislative considerations of the convention by C. H. Rice's address on "Public Text Books." Mr. Rice, city superintendent of Portland public schools briefly summarized the arguments for and against state or district owned books, concluding with outstanding arguments for the innovation. Plans are already underway for the introduction of a "free text-book" bill at the next session of the legislature.

Professor T. H. Gentile of the Oregon State Normal school at Monmouth also spoke yesterday morning, his choice of subject being a plea for the use of the objective tests in the schools in lieu of the antiquated essay type. According to the new method, the pupil is required to answer simply by checking in a choice of answers, or by the filling in of blanks, insuring uniformity.

A third speaker on a full morning program was Miss Julia Spooner of Portland who, in dealing with the topic, "Teacher Training," declared that "the day of the amateur, immature teacher is passed"; that at least two years of formal training, in addition to the high school course, should be required. Miss Spooner advised the substitution of "teachers' colleges" for normal schools.

"We have all got to re-study history with our children," Miss Cornelia Marvin, state librarian, told the assembly yesterday afternoon, so decidedly have we substituted the new for the old. In the study of the motives and outcomes in place of rulers and events. "Our whole educational system is an effort to democratize culture." Miss Marvin further stated and our best, if not only, means is through books. The westward development promises "to bring the greatest possible development to the Pacific Rim." Miss Marvin predicted and it behooves the adult to pursue his education to the end.

The business of the morning had to do with the reading of proposed amendments. The body declined to eliminate that section of Article II of the by-laws which states "We believe that with the aid of Divine Power these objects will be accomplished." The reports of the day concerned kindergarten work, with Mrs. G. M. Gilnes of Portland conducting the session; reports from the department of education with Mrs. J. F. Risley of Portland the Director; the acceptance of the Doernbecher Hospital pledge; a talk by Mrs. Mozelle Hair of the University of Oregon extension department; a talk by Miss Helen Cowgill of Corvallis on boys and girls club work; and a recommendation from Mrs. Mabel Arundel Harris of Portland on standards in literature.

The educational dinner at the Gray Belle was largely attended. Mrs. La Moine R. Clark, representing the Salem teachers, gave the formal welcome. Mrs. Ulen, president of the Portland grade teachers association gave as her response "New Methods in Teaching." Said Mrs. Ulen, "We have children, not books, to teach, the three L's of labor, love, and life, instead of the three R's."

C. A. Howard of Marshfield, with from the viewpoint of the teacher. Mr. Cox, of the boy's training school, emphasized the necessity of a skillful program in socializing the boy in the post-institution program.

Special music was furnished at the church last night by Professor T. S. Roberts, Miss Vera Cooley, Miss Josephine Albert, and Claude Stevenson, all of whom were called upon for encores.

Dr. Coleman, the first speaker on the program last night, dealt with a difficult subject, but dealt with it well. The urgency of sex instruction in our educational system was the theme of a thoroughly worthwhile address. Dr. Coleman is president of the Oregon Social Hygiene society. As a final recommendation this authoritative spokesman declared himself in favor of the laboratory method to make clear this phase of educational instruction.

Dr. Doney, who gave the second address of the evening, in a consideration of "The Type of Teacher I Should Like to Have For My Child," struck, in the words of the state president, Mrs. W. W. Gabriel, a very tender, a very beautiful, a very responsive chord. "We are interested in the things which have possibilities—a child can be trained infinitely in either direction," said Dr. Doney in his introduction, developing the theme that "the contagion of personality is the important thing after all." The significant thing about the teacher is that she it is who virtually selects the circumstances in which the child is to be a participant. For this reason, Dr. Doney assumes that the teacher who is essentially fine must have "a great self to touch the ever-expanding self of the child."

Mrs. W. W. Gabriel, state president, made a public expression of appreciation, in behalf of the delegates, to the hostess city last night. The convention will close today.
