

Some Protest to Prices Charged but Demand for Tickets Continues

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. (AP.)-Gate prices for the annual Army-Navy football classic are causing some complaint, but the unprecedented demand for seats continues just the same.

with officials here came from a member of congress, who objected to Secretary Wilbur that the $10 and $15 scale fixed by local authorities in Chicago, where the game is to be played, is beyond the means of the ordinary football fan. The war department also has received a few scattering complaints.

The sale of the big block of tickets allotted to Chicago authorities is regarded by the war and navy departments as none of their affair, however and no objection to high prices is seen here, so long as the public is eager to pay. Some Chicagoans have telegraphed here, saying they saw no prospect to getting into Soldiers' Field, even at $10 or $15 aplece, and were willing to go much higher.

Neither department has any tickets to sell. The governmental quota has been allotted as usual to graduates of the two academies. and to public officials, who get limited quotas at $2.50 and $3.50. The pressure exercised by the friends of the fortunate has been unusually heavy this year, and the seats available from that source have been snapped up long ago. "Drawing on his Pacific coast experiences, Secretary Wilbur said he saw nothing wrong in charging $10 to see an Army-Navy game when "they charge as much as $5 to see a Stanford - California game."
