

OUTLOOK IS GOOD IN THE AUTO LINE

Business Looks Fine for the Holiday and Winter
Season Here

One of the most optimistic automobile men of Salem is R. N. MacDonald of the MacDonald Auto company. He says the outlook for the winter and holiday season is the best ever. "Our business this year has far exceeded our expectations, and the general outlook for business in this vicinity proves that Salem is going ahead in every way," he says. Mr.

MacDonald is contemplating the extensive remodeling of his garage and show room in anticipation of the early arrival of the new models of the Marmón, Willys-Knight, Overland and Whippet cars handled by him.

Governor Pierce Plans to Give Three Lectures

Governor Pierce has accepted an invitation to give his lecture on "Christian Civilization," at meetings of the Northwest Methodist Men's convention to be held at Spokane, December 7, Seattle December 8 and in Portland December 9. Similar conventions will be held in other sections of the United States, according to word received at the executive department.

SANTA CLAUS AND DEER WILL PAY VISIT HERE

very many of 'em there; it's mostly water, and what kids there are are mostly pretty hungry and peaked. And poor! If they get the knuckle bone of a seal to play with, and a bird skin for a coat, and a hunk of raw blubber to eat they think that's Santa Claus.

It isn't a starved south pole Santa Claus that's coming to Salem; he's fat and frisky and he believes the world is a good place to live in. His reindeer are fat, as is his Eskimo driver. You'll see them all.

He's going to tell you all about reindeer, and about Christmas, and about your neighbors who are poorer than you are. He's the jolliest person!

Sometimes you think it's fun to get a whole big bag of candy and eat it all; to get a new gun and shoot it all the time; to get a pair of skates and never let anybody else touch them. Santa is going to show a lot more fun than that.

He's going to show how it makes a fellow feel good all over, and for days and weeks and forever, to be nice to other people. Nobody ever gave Santa Claus anything, did he? No! But Santa doesn't care. He gets his fun out of giving; and he's the funniest ever. And he isn't ever going to die; he lives always, because he is so good and so happy and so helpful.

He's going to say something about like this:
"Well, kids, here we are again. It's gong to be a be-yoot-ful year, if ye start right. Now, you hustle out and earn some money, or save some money that you've been hiding away to spend on yourself, and you go right down town and say to the store keepers, and say it early, before the rush—

"There's a poor kid out our way that hasn't enough to eat, or to wear, or to play with, and he's lame and out of luck. Here's all my Christmas money for him, and I want you to send him this and this and this—" and the merchant will know that you've seen and talked with Santa Claus. I've an idea that when Christmas comes you'll find something in your own stocking that will surprise you! Anyhow, you'll have more fun than you ever had in your life.

The Statesman and the Capital Journal, working with the Oregon Journal of Portland, and with the merchants of Salem, are bringing Santa Claus and his reindeer to Salem, about the first week in December. They're going to offer you a lot of good treats in their stores, in the reindeer and in Santa Claus himself, and in the memory of making this Oregon's Merriest Christmas!

Read the papers every day; there'll be something new that you'll like.
