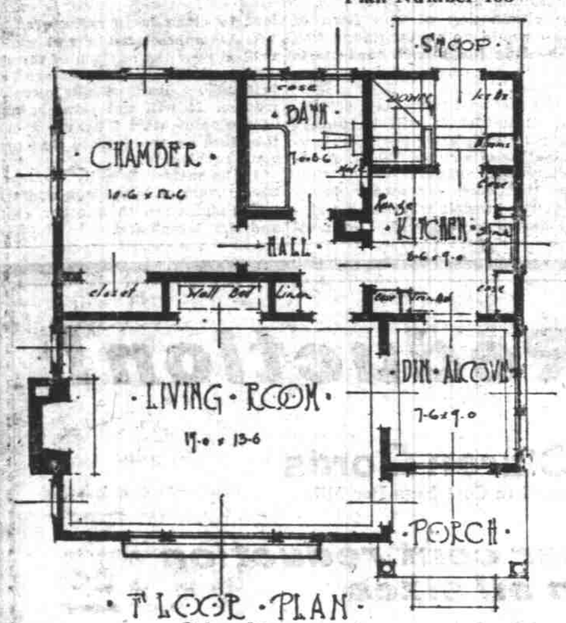
Compactness Is Feature of Home Plans

Plan Number 405



With a ground space of 28 by 30 feet, today's house plan is one ideally adapted for a small town lot or for use as a cottage at the beach.

While but one bedroom is provided for in the plan, a wall bed in the living room makes that room an auxiliary chamber for emergency use.

One of the features of the house is its general compactness, and especially in the arrangement of the kitchen. This room is 8 feet 6 inches by 9 feet and is designed for use with the minimum amount of walking by the housewife. It will be noticed that the sink is directly under the window where ample light is provided for such culinary operations as are conducted in the sink or on the adjacent drain boards.

The dining alcove is adjoining the kitchen and at the front of the house. The kitchen, dining alcove and enclosed back porch, with a built-in ice box, form one unit of the house, a unit which is separated from the rest of the rooms.

LUMBER BUSINESS BECOMING SLOWER

Little New Construction Undertaken in Fall and Winter Season

In its weekly review of the lumber market, the American Lumberman, Chicago, says:

Lumber trade has slowed down in the last week or so. There continues to be a good seasonal demand from the cities. At this time of year little new construction is undertaken in the north and east. However, buildings being pushed to completion still require a good deal of lumber. Farm trade in the middle west was recovering from the effects of recent heavy rains, but early snowfall is a new handicap. There is good evidence that the farmers have need of lumber, and retail dealers in rural districts believe that there will be considerable yard trade if there is enough open weather between now and the definite setting in of winter. Trade in the south and southwest has been recovering from the slump of cotton prices. It is not yet as active as it was before that occurred, but it is believed that winter will see a good deal of building done. There is fair activity in Florida, and California expects to do an unusually large volume of winter construction.

During the week ended Oct. 30, shipments of the principal softwood mills amounted to four per cent less than their production, but bookings were twelve per cent less. The northwest fir and California pine mills are responsible for the showing, as other groups of producers sold a much larger percentage of their output. Fir business with the Atlantic seaboard has been much handicapped by an advance in vessel freights and middle west rail trade is diminishing because of bad weather. There has been an excellent movement to foreign ports, probably at somewhat lower [illegible] and good sales to California. Production of fir has continued quite active, and though mill stocks have been much reduced during the year, the excess of output over current sales has weakened prices, and there is talk of closing down some of the mills. Both southern pine and Inland Empire western pine mills reported bookings within two per cent of their cut. Sales of softwood producers since the first of the year have mounted to one per cent more than their production, so that there is an absence of surplus stocks that might cause selling pressure.

Hardwood demand has been excellent and beyond the expectations of the manufacturers. Furniture makers are good buyers, and while automobile purchasing has slowed down it still is of considerable volume. Many industries are taking on some stock for their winter requirements. There continues to be a good movement to the millwork and flooring plants.
