

WONDERFUL WORK BY THE TRIPLE A

Oregon State Motor Association Has Started Something Very Big

Otto M. Jones, manager of the educational and publicity department of the Oregon State Motor association, was the speaker at the noon luncheon yesterday of the Salem Rotary club—and he "said it with pictures," mostly moving pictures; travel pictures showing Oregon scenery.

He showed pictures on the Pacific highway, giving scenes that delight the tourist and invite the investor. He showed pictures of actual fishing on the McKenzie river, all the way from Rainbow camp to Nimrod Inn; fishing scenes in which 80 trout were landed.

He showed scenes of outdoor recreational enjoyment in various parts of Oregon; took his audience to the snow mountains of the Cascades; took them into the great inland empire; conveyed them over the Century drive around the Bend district.

And he took them over the Redwood highway in southwestern Oregon, and back to points in and around Salem, and on up to Silver Creek falls.

Ernest Smith, general manager of the Triple-A, the American Automobile association, has seen these Oregon moving pictures. They were exhibited at the association meeting in Ohio last September, and at other meetings in the east.

So the American Automobile association has asked for copies of the films. There are over 850 clubs in this association in the United States, and Oregon State Motor association people see their work cut out for them. They are going to be mighty busy. But the result is going to be that Oregon scenes, in moving pictures, are going to be witnessed by literally millions of people in this country, beginning right away, and continuing indefinitely.

And this is going to bring tourists to Oregon by the tens of thousands, and many of them are bound to become investors in this state, for the pictures show orchard and farm and industrial and other scenes, besides the recreational and other features of Oregon.

Phil A. Elker, the Salem automobile man and Rotarian, is responsible for the bringing of Mr. Jones and the pictures to Salem, and they are to be seen by other service clubs and kindred organizations here, as a result of the initial showing.

7:30 will be features of the day. Last night Dr. Mahood spoke on "Is Revival Needed." It is, according to the unimpeachable testimony presented. With the increase of worldly prosperity, and with the evil passions let loose by the war, society and business and politics and church and home were never at so low an ebb. There is hope, but no salvation in the blind optimism of Emerson who would not even see the evil that destroyed the people about him; there is ground for pessimism, but no hope in the wanton gloominess of Carlyle. Only in the wise Christian vision of one like Browning, who could see the worst and still hope and work and pray for the best, is there social or religious or political health.

The speaker gave a stunning array of crime statistics, showing how far the nation has drifted in its spasmodic neglect of the principles of the Pilgrim fathers. He presented the testimony of men eminently qualified to judge, and the evidence on which every thoughtful person must judge, that only in spiritual regeneration is there hope for the America of our fathers. One New York merchant said, "The only thing that can save America is an emperor." Questioned further, he said— "And His name is Jesus Christ; He only will redeem our nation from sordid damnation."

He believes that there will be no world peace until America makes some things right with God and he appeals to the fathers and mothers—business men and who dread the next war. It is this only way to avert it. He is preaching a sane, helpful gospel, without frill or fad. A cordial invitation to all, to attend.

YEAR-END ISSUE MAKES HEADWAY

Citizens Cooperating With Those in Charge of Edition for January 1

The management of the Statesman desires to express to the commercial interests of Salem its keen appreciation of the fine early business that has been extended already for its 41st annual Year-End edition. Under the direction of the Martin Service the Year-End number is rapidly taking definite shape. It is considerably different from the editions that have preceded it. That is as it should be for this office can think of nothing that will afford greater satisfaction than to have so extensively delivered on the morning of January 1st, 1927, this splendid Oregon Statesman. From the preliminary lay-outs and arrangements we can promise to the people of the community a very interesting and most readable paper. It is delightfully illustrated and its magazine style of arrangement is appealing. But we have from the first realized that the Year-End edition could be no better than the support given it by the commercial interests of the community and it is with a feeling of genuine thanks that we can say that we are convinced that the advertising support will fully justify the continued best efforts of the Martin Service, who are directing its preparation.

Stop, look, and listen to our appeal. If you are not absolutely satisfied with your laundry problem, call 165. Hand work our specialty. (*)

CAMPBELL MARRIED TWO IN SHORT TIME

Case Continued to Permit Him to Consult With His Attorney on Matter

When you have two wives, it is better to spend some time with each of them to avoid trouble, as Alexander Campbell, 23, is beginning to find out. Mrs. Theresa Campbell, 28, his wife in Salem, filed suit against him in justice court here, charging non-support, and when tracing his whereabouts discovered that he had another wife in Portland. He now faces bigamy charges.

Campbell married Theresa Pokam in Vancouver, Wash., in December 1925. He brought her to Salem and lived with her about two months, she alleged, and then trouble began that resulted in Campbell leaving home for long spells of time.

Meanwhile Campbell, in May of this year, went to Vancouver again with Katherine Wright, 18, of Portland, and obtained another marriage license under the name of Dewey Campbell. They were married by a different minister than the one who married Campbell and his first wife.

Campbell alleges that his second wife knew he had not been divorced from his first one when the second marriage took place. He also says that his first wife had deceived him as to her age and that she had relations with other men.

After the first wife had filed the non-support charges, she went to work to locate Campbell, and traced him to Portland through the industrial accident commission from which he was drawing compensation. Further investigation showed the existence of the second wife.

Campbell is in jail, having failed to post the $100 bail demanded of him. His case has been continued to give him time to consult with an attorney. Charges of bigamy will probably be placed against him Monday or Tuesday, it was announced last night at the district attorney's office.

MANY SOUVENIRS TAKEN BY MARIE TO RUMANIA

and four days ago greeted the Leviathan, bringing the imperial visitor to the shores of the new world.

Two hundred and twenty pieces of luggage were stored aboard the Berengaria for the royal party, of which 20 boxes were said to be filled with souvenirs.

The queen occupied the imperial suite, used by the Prince of Wales on his visit last year, flower filled when she left today.

The queen boarded the ship last night. Princess Ileana went aboard about 1 o'clock this morning and Prince Nicholas a few hours later.

The royal family were all up early today and for nearly two hours before the ship sailed at 10 o'clock were busy receiving friends who came on farewell visits. Among these was J. Butler Wright, assistant secretary of state, and Mrs. Wright. William Nelson Cromwell, president of the Friends of Rumania; Ira Nelson Morris, honorary consul general of Rumania in Chicago, and members of the diplomatic corps. Col. John H. Carroll and Samuel Hill were not present, having bid the queen goodbye before today. In attendance until the last moment was J. A. Ayres, representative of Ford, who was dropped from the train at Seattle and retained upon the royal party's arrival in New York and who has accompanied the princess on her drive to Tuxedo.

In the brief last interview she gave to the press, the queen reiterated her love of this country, saying: "We have in Rumania a feeling of trust and love for America, just as I believe America has for Rumania. I feel that this is not the last visit. American and American people are loved by us all!"
