PROFITS FROM SUGAR BEETS

"Joseph Brady, local field representative for the American Sugar company of Chaska, is this week showing to local beet men the tabulation made by his company showing the results of beet raising at the near by vicinity of St. Clair, this year, this being one of the communities where the work has been followed for a number of years and is being handled on a scientific and methodical basis. The figures, which Be sure to see our line of hats beare carried out in detail for each of the eight farmers carrying the project forward there, show that from a total of 143.18 acres, or less than a quarter section of land, these men have produced for their community a total of almost $10,000 within the present year, of which amount $5.945 is net gain to them after deducting their hired labor and fixed charges for production of the crop. The average tonnage of beets per acre for the entire St. Claire project is 11.51, while the champion beet raiser of the community secured from his 5 1/2 acres an average of more than 14 1/2 tons. This man is John A. Kruse, who secured a net profit of $49.91 per acre from his labor, while the average for all the group was a net profit of $41.52; and $34.15 net and expedient and hereby declares profit per acre was realized by the lowest man in the group."

The above is from the Herald of St. Peter, Minn., of last week's issue.

The American Beet Sugar company, which owns the factory at Chaska, Minnesota, has its headquarters at Denver, gense of which will be assumed Colorado. It owns and operates seven other factories, at Rocky Ford, Lamar and Las Animas, Colo., Chino and Oxnard, to the established grade, construct-Calif., Grand Island, Neb., Mason City, Iowa, and East Grand ing Portland cement concrete

The contract the company is now offering the farmers in thirty feet in width, in eccordance the vicinity of St. Peter, Minn., is identical with the one being with the plans and specifications offered the farmers of the Willamette valley by the Utah-Idaho Sugar company. That is, it is a $6 a ton minimum ber 15th, 1926, now on file in the participating contract. The farmer gets $6 a ton on delivery of his beets, and he owns half the sugar. He will receive half the selling price of the sugar, less half the selling costs. The farmer also gets the beet tops.

The farmers of the Willamette valley will get a contract $1 a ton higher for 1928, in case a factory is built here.

And the per acre tennage in the Salem district, ought to average higher than fourteen and a half. It averaged 17 tons in the Bellingham, Wash., district this year, with an average of 15.6 sugar content-devoted to sugar beets as a major crop.

And selected land in the Salem district ought to do better than that, in both tonnage and sugar content.

According to a news item in the St. Peter Herald, quoted above, giving the terms of the 1927 contract being offered, and the facts about the opening of the new campaign for acreage, the farmers of that section are more than satisfied Salem, Oregon, deems it necessary with the profits and benefits of sugar beet growing.

The farmers of the Willamette valley will come to be still better satisfied, for they have a section that is well adapted to sugar beet growing-And this valley is bound to come to be known in time as the sugar bowl of the United States.

The Oregon legislature at its session this winter must be careful about indiscriminately getting under the bonds of the irrigation districts that are in difficulties. But it is the duty of the legislature to attempt to work out a program for the protection of the settlers in those districts. And a thorough going business handling of the affairs of most of the districts may make them solvent. The state of Oregon can afford to get under a progressive program in the handling of these

The Statesman has in hand an article describing sugar beet harvesting near one of the factories in Nebraska. It is an inspiring description. There is no other industry on the cil the 15th day of November. land that gives more inspiring scenes in harvest time. Nor any other that does so much, directly and indirectly, to make farming operations profitable, and business lively in the cities and towns. It will be a wonderful thing, in the Willamette valley, when harvest is going on for a score and upward of beet sugar factories. It will mean such prosperity as we have scarcely dreamed of. Not on account of the beet sugar industry alone, but because of the indirect benefits that will be conferred upon every other industry on the land, and every line of business and every property value in our cities and the estate of Frederick Adolph
