Contemplating Suicide,
Hesitates, Then Arrested

Supposedly crazed by drink and desertion by her husband, a woman last night was arrested by local police officers as she prepared to jump into the Willamette river below the Marion-Polk county bridge. She was booked at the city jail on a charge of drunkenness, and later released.

The woman's actions under the bridge attracted passers, who held her and warned the local police. She is said to have run around on the river bank, apparently unable to make the fatal leap into the river.

HIT AT CURB PUMPS

Claim Made That Too Much Space Used in This Way

The council, on recommendation of the planning commission, will soon take steps to stop the rapid increase in number of curb gasoline pumps, it developed when the council referred a petition of the Capitol Motors for two such pumps to the commission.

The commission had advocated granting the permit with the remark that it was out of sympathy with the policy because the pumps took up too much space that could otherwise be used for parking automobiles.

New Course Introduced
Recently at Hi School

Eula S. Creech, head of the domestic science department of the Salem high school, announces the addition of a new course, "Nutrition Dietetics." Miss Creech has been advocating this for some time and is highly elated over its adoption. The course has been taught in many of the more progressive schools for some time and Miss Creech believes it a valuable addition to her department.

The new class which starts with an enrollment of 14, will be under the direction of Mrs. Gladys Jensen. The enrollment has consisted of girls only, but it is expected that many of the young men who are preparing for a pre-medicine course, will take advantage of this class as being in line with their future work. The course does not relate to cooking of foods but to the relative heat and nutrient values of same, special diets, etc.

ENGULFED BY ICE FLOE

now." In they piled, till the little cabin was filled "like a subway jam" one of the survivors said later, and others were standing on the deck.

Off went the Linseed King, burrowing her nose through ice floes that made the river like an arctic sea, hard fresh water ice, river men said, down from the upper Hudson and at that time being forced upstream by a flow tide.

Singing still and clapping their hands to keep warm were these men who wanted work, and the sound of their voices floated back to shore lustily over the ice.

Midstream at last and then suddenly the Linseed King careened to one side, ground, it is believed, between huge cakes of ice with hundreds of tons of other ice behind it.

The frightened passengers scrambled all to one side in a mad effort to right the craft and like a crazy pendulum the Linseed King swung back to normal and then listed to the other side, over and over until water rushed over her gunwales and she capsized.

About half of those in the cabin were thrown into the freezing water or managed to run from the compartment in time to jump. The other half were trapped where they were and death was at least merciful in that it must have been quick.

As the submerged launch floated sluggishly among the grinding ice floes some of the freezing men clung to it desperately while others climbed onto tipping cakes of ice and lay flat with the cold water lapping over them. The singing was turned to screams for help now, but heard from the shore the screaming sounded not so different from the shouts of song and no one paid attention. One lighter captain who had watched the men off and might have been able to aid them, heard their cries, but only shrugged as he moved closer to his cabin stove.

"I just thought they were still singing," he said later, "and did not ever go out of my cabin." So it was almost half an hour before the first rescue boat reached the scene. But then they came thick and fast; tugs and launches and fire and police boats.

Twenty-four poor half frozen men were dragged onto tugs and hauled out in engine rooms while being rushed to an emergency hospital established at a New York pier. From there they were taken to hospitals. Captain Rohweider was picked up swimming strongly from the Jersey shore and taken to Edgewater.

Placed under a doctor's care the captain was questioned at length by Edgewater police and then was sent for by the Manhattan headquarters. He refused to cross the river, however, saying that he was suffering acutely from submersion and further questioning would have to wait.

After the living had been cared for the task began of recovering the bodies of the dead. Three were found in the river at the scene of the accident. The others were taken with grappling hooks from the cabin of the Linseed King where it was beached at 254th street on the Bronx shore after being carried upstream by the ice.

Crowds gathered on the shore, some of them wives and mothers and other loved ones of the men who had sought their last job. One by one the bodies were brought up and laid on the ice shore until there were 27 in a long sad row, bringing the known dead to 20.

Captain Rohweider told police that there had been 62 men on the Linseed King when it left the Manhattan pier, and so search was continued for the seven bodies still unaccounted for. Of the known dead 21 were those of white men and nine negroes.

A half dozen investigations were begun during the day to determine where the blame lay and whether the tragedy might have been avoided.

KAY PROMISES
QUIZ ON BONDS

COUNTY JUDGES AND COMMISSIONERS HOLD MEETING

Vanduser Declares Bus and Truck Operators Should Be Met Fairly

PORTLAND, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Any attempt to force the state of Oregon to assume $12,000,000 of state irrigation bonds, now valued at $3,500,000 will meet with his opposition. Tom B. Kay, state treasurer, declared today in a speech before the county judges and county commissioners of Oregon in annual session here.

The matter of the irrigation bonds will be thoroughly investigated when the legislature meets next month, Mr. Kay added.

Several of the county judges and commissioners from eastern Oregon where the farmers are said to be the most seriously affected by the irrigation plans, indicated belief that the state is morally obligated to assume the bonds. Mr. Kay insisted, however, that the bondholders should take their losses along with the Oregon farmer. He declared that, although the state certified investing state trust funds in irrigation bonds, the bonds were thus merely made eligible for state use, but added that such action did not guarantee the bonds.

H. B. Vanduser, member of the Oregon state highway commission, discussed the highway system in Oregon, pointing out that the state's road debt had been reduced to $35,000,000 and calling attention to the fact that a big state building program was started ten years ago.

The situation regarding the bus and truck line operators is one that must be met by the people, Vanduser declared. These operators may ask the next legislature for a new bill regulating their services, he said, adding that it was not the intention to drive them from the state as the lines are the only means through which many remote parts of the state may be reached or served.

While of the opinion that the stages and buses cause highway damage commensurate with their size, speed and schedule, and that they should pay for "the privilege and for the wear and tear of the state highways," Mr. Vanduser suggested, that the operators should be met fairly and squarely, and said he considered it was agreed that nothing was to be done that would tend to jeopardize their interests.

During the afternoon session today, round table discussions were led by County Judges R. H. Mast, Coos county; C. P. Bernard, Lane county; H. E. Cross, Clackamas county, and I. M. Schanep, Umatilla.

County Judge Moses, Benton county, president of the organization, announced the appointment of legislative and resolutions committees as follows:

Resolutions: County Judge Eclus Pollock, Josephine county; Judge C. W. James, Lincoln; Commissioner Grant Phegley, Multnomah; Commissioner Chester C. Gardner, Polk; Commissioner J. S. Innes, Deschutes.

Legislative: Judge C. P. Bernard, Lane county; Judge I. M. Schanep, Umatilla; Judge George K. Quine, Douglas; Commissioner Amedee M. Smith, Multnomah; Commissioner J. E. Smith, Marion; Erwin A. Taft, Multnomah.

SITE OF NORMAL SCHOOL

votes. Under the rules adopted for balloting all of these applicants were eliminated on the second ballot with the exception of La Grande, Pendleton and The Dalles.

C. L. Starr then moved that The Dalles be selected as the location for the normal school. Only three of the nine regents, including Fuller, Starr and Bryant voted for this motion. With The Dalles eliminated from consideration the regents then divided by a vote of five to four in favor of La Grande. After the final vote had been announced it was decided that the action of the regents should be considered unanimous.

The principal discussion at the meeting here today centered on the question of policy in locating the new normal school. Some of the regents expressed the opinion that the new normal school should be located where it would best serve the Eastern Oregon district, while others said it should be considered as a statewide institution.

The question of policy was determined through the adoption of a resolution prepared by the secretary of state, which had the support of six of the nine regents.

The resolution read: "Looking forward to the continued growth of the state and the natural trend of development, and believing that facilities for the proper training of teachers will be provided by the state from time to time, this board now declares as its policy that it considers that the action of the people at the general election of November 2, with regard to the establishment of a normal school in some one of the counties of Eastern Oregon, was to the effect that a normal school should be so established in that section of the state to serve as it is now developed and may be affected by future development."

The three regents who opposed the passage of this resolution were Fuller, Starr and Turner.

The city of La Grande, through its commercial organizations, has offered to deed free to the state for normal school purposes the choice of three sites. Two of the sites are within the city limits while the third is located a short distance from the municipality.

It also was agreed that the grade school buildings at La Grande shall be turned over to the normal school regents for practice teaching, and that the city shall provide adequate water and sewage systems. In event new grade schools are erected in La Grande the normal school regents shall be consulted in connection with their architecture and design.

Selection of the site on which the new normal school shall be erected will not be determined until after the legislature has convened and voted an appropriation to defray the cost of its construction. At that time a committee of the normal school regents and an architect will visit La Grande and determine which of the three sites is best suited to the needs of the institution.

The measure authorizing the establishment of the normal school did not carry any appropriation. As a result of this omission from the measure it will be necessary to appeal to the legislature for an appropriation. It has been estimated that the original building would cost approximately $175,000.

Selection of a location for the new state tuberculosis hospital in Eastern Oregon probably will not be determined by the state board of control until next week. The location of this institution will depend to a large extent upon the contents of a report now being prepared by Dr. G. C. Helling, superintendent of the state tuberculosis hospital in Salem, and J. Marshall, representing the national tuberculosis association. Dr. Helling and Mr. Marshall accompanied the board of control on its recent trip to Eastern Oregon for the purpose of inspection prospective locations for the hospital.
