slightly decreased during the year.

"Manufacturing, the service industries, and commerce generally have continued to improve their methods, to reduce costs, and to improve service. In aggregate, each industry appears to show substantial profits except the textile and some parts of the coal industry.

"While there has been a slackening in production and demand for several staple lines during the past few weeks, we enter the new year with no consequential overstock of manufactured goods. With the largest volume of construction during the past year ever known, there may prove to be some construction in advance of immediate needs, but slackening in this direction may be partially compensated by the assurance of a larger amount of public construction during the next year. Savings of the country have shown a steady increase, and there is ample cheap capital available.

"The lag of agricultural recovery has continued and has been accentuated by distressing crop failures in some localities. Cotton and some fruit crops beyond world demand have brought about prices below the costs of production of large areas of those commodities. There is a consequent lowered buying power in some agricultural sections.

"Taking the foreign field as a whole, it shows continued progress toward balance of budgets; reduction of floating debt; greater stability in currency, and somewhat diminished unemployment. The most important exception has been the results of the British coal strike which left the world poorer by its interruption to the

than they might have otherwise.

The police came on the scene quickly and it was largely due to their efforts that the panic was not more serious. Ambulances were rushed to remove a half dozen of the worst injured to the hospital. Most of the others recovered shortly and were able to go to their home.

As usual there had been much drinking and horse play in some sections of the crowd, although the majority were orderly merry-makers. Some of those who were thrown down received cuts from broken bottles strewn in the neighborhood.

The St. Paul's celebration, which originally was just a midnight religious service, soon was debased by riotous revelry, but since the war the gathering in front of the edifice on New Year's eve, while still noisy, have been more tame.

"This year Salem is going to grow, and Marion county is going to grow, more than she ever has before. The farmers are going to grow more prunes, get more money for them, and buy bigger automobiles. I have the inside dope on that. The improvements in store for everybody this year in all mechanical lines will absolutely beat anything ever turned out by any year on record. That's a cinch.

Could you light a fire if you didn't have a match?

And that might well lead to the question: Where did the first fire come from, anyway? Oh, yes, of course, anyone can make a guess; but try to prove it.

Anyhow—man in way back days discovered fire. He needed it in his business. He found out about it somehow and put it to work.

And now we get our matches free with every cigar.

And consider what else it does for us—heat, transportation, illumination—and unfortunately sometimes terrible damage and loss of life.

J. Carroll Mansfield—the artist who created the first educational story-picture, "High Lights of History," has now produced a tabloid Sunday page portraying the History of the World, developing the achievements of man since the days when he was emerging from ignorance.
