CHAPTER FORTY-SIX
Argument poised on the detective's tongue at his rebuff from Brazenose, Sr., but his orders were explicit. Under no circumstances was he to lose sight of Peter Brown, and in default of an ultrarago to perform this duty his choice was limited. Therefore, he, too, plunged down the bank and into the brush, leaving Brazenose to tramp on alone to Fitzwilliam descent, amid the ruins of his life.
The business was doomed to dwindle, the temple had been desecrated by the son of its high priest, and the Boy—the Boy upon whom all his hopes were set—had failed him.
When the detective had seen Piggy enter the barn, he left his associate of the motorcycle briefly in charge and hastened to the tavern, where he made inquiries about the stranger. But Braze-nose, though observed, had not been identified. The man then called headquarters, at Jaffrey, by telephone, gave a detailed description of the visitor, and returned to his post.
Roberta, depressed by the quarrel, was sitting with Celia when Piggy returned, pretending to read but really wondering what there was in a name, however silly, to send him into such a rage, and not a little indignant still over his charge that she lacked honor. But Janet, in the kitchen, saw him approach from an unusual direction and her keen eyes marked the dejection of his mien. When he passed the window without a glance and went on to the bar, she hastily dried her hands, threw a cloak over her shoulders, and followed.
She found him sitting on the running board of his car, elbows on knees and head in hands.

should, I'm no sae aul yet that I can's work. But I'm thinkin' he'll no do that."
Her stanch courage merely made matters worse and Piggy turned away to hide a quiver of his chin, muttering, "There's The Business, too."
"Aye, that's bad. There's no blinkin, lad. Come, noo, come intae the hoose wi' Janet an' eat yer lunch."
Piggy wished no lunch. Neither did he wish to see Roberta. He resisted the old woman's efforts to entice him, and left untouched the plate of food she carried out to him later, though he drank the coffee thirstily. About five o'clock he presented himself at the kitchen door, having first ascertained by peering through a window that Janet was alone.
"I won't be here for dinner."
"Whaur are ye goin' lad?"
"To the devil," said Piggy shortly, as the easiest way to avoid explanations.
A moment later he shot down the road in his car, trailed by the motor-cycle man.

"GREAT OR SMALL"

KRAMER TO SPEAK ON "STOP KICKIN' MY HOUN DAUG"

"Consider the lilies." This was Dr. James W. Kramer's text for one of the most powerful addresses ever given in Salem, at the First Baptist church last night.
The revival meetings are gripping the people and the attendance is a great surprise, considering that the meetings only began on Sunday. Mr. McCravy sang "My Sav-four" and the chorus led the singing for the great congregation.
"Big Jim" has a happy faculty of getting his audience in a good humor and then striking his message home with telling effect.
Speaking on the subject "Great or Small, Which?" he called attention to the lily of the valley, its beauty, its purity, its sweetness, its glory. Yet it never spins, it does no work, in a short time it crumbles to dust. But it is not useless. God never made a useless thing. Point after point, in beautifully turned phrases and swiftly moving figures, was clinched in such a way that those who were there can never forget.
Everyone can give something to God. He asks for two material things: one seventh of our time and one tenth of our income. We dare not give less. It is the starting point. Then we can give what is more than material things. We can give to him service, witness.

life, loyalty, personal influence, wit and humor and incident.
Every argument is amply illustrated with story and incidents from real life. A man said last evening: "That is one of the strongest appeals I ever heard from any minister to Christian people."
Tonight Dr. Kramer will preach on Champ Clark's saying: "Stop kickin' my houn daug 'round." Great interest is manifested in this subject and it is one of his strongest messages, full of humor and pathos.

Recently a traveler called at an Hotel in Paris and asked what the charge was for rooms.

"Forty francs for the first floor, thirty francs for the second, twenty francs for the third, and ten francs for the fourth floor," replied the hotel proprietor.
"Oh, very well, thank you," said the traveler, as he turned to go away.
"That does not please you?" replied the proprietor, as he called him back.
"Oh, your prices are all right," said the traveler, "but your hotel is not high enough for me."

LATE SPORTS

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 12.—(By AP).—Young Harry Wills, negro junior welterweight of San Diego, won on a technical knockout over Billy Murphy of Lowell, Mass., in the first round of a scheduled 10-round bout at Oakland auditorium tonight.

The fight was over two minutes after it started. Wills, a terrific puncher, started out with a rush and battered Murphy around the ring with sweeping rights and lefts to face and body. A hard blow to the jaw floored the eastern boy for the count of nine, and he came up groggy, reeling around the ring.

Two more rights to the chin sent him to the canvas again, and the referee stopped the contest.
