AUTOMOBILE DEPARTMENT

The recommendation of Governor Patterson for a separate division for the administration of the automotive laws of the state is sound advice.

This is now done in a division of the office of the secretary of state. The only difference would be the appointment of a man who would have exclusive charge of that department of the state's activities—

Giving his whole time to it.

It has grown so large, and is growing and due to grow so much and so fast, that it is of sufficient importance to require, in the interests of all concerned, a man at its head who has the industry and ability to give it proper attention, and the opportunity to devote his whole time to it, for the good of the service, to say nothing of economy. There is economy in having such a vast and important work well directed to the end that it may be well done.

MORE WAYS TO USE GOOSEBERRIES

Salem is the permanent gooseberry center of the United States, because we grow here the best canning berry known, and also a berry that is as fine as any for jellies and jams, and is a superior berry for shipment in its fresh state, holding up unusually well for long periods—

Because our district is unusually free from dangerous gooseberry pests—

And because we can grow more berries to the acre than is possible in other sections, and gooseberry land here is lower in price and the overhead lower.

Under the most favorable conditions, gooseberries have yielded here at the rate of 25,000 pounds to the acre, and four tons to the acre is not uncommon among those who have the most suitable lands and understand the best conditions of culture.

What our gooseberry industry needs is a stabilized market, at prices to the producers that will make them a fair profit—

And this can be helped very materially by the building here of jam and jelly plants. England has many such plants, some of them of enormous size, and shipping their products to all parts of the world.

It can be helped, too, by an advertising campaign in this country, for our canned products, and by some help from the growers in widening the foreign distribution of our pack. These are matters in which both producers and packers are mutually interested—

And in fact every one in this section is interested. They mean the almost indefinite extension of an industry that is in the nature of a franchise industry, on account of the natural adaptability of our section for producing a superior berry in large per acre tonnage.

The gooseberry is an ages old fruit. It would not be an expensive product to advertise and exploit. The knowledge of it is already general, and the taste long ago established; reaching back beyond the beginnings of written history.

MORE DRIED APPLES

H. L. Hudson, general traffic manager of the Port of Portland, in speaking before the Salem Rotary club at its noon luncheon yesterday, told of the rapid increase of ocean-going commerce at that port—

Giving many interesting facts concerning the constant successful efforts to secure more ships for that port, and more products for them to carry to the world's markets. It is almost an epic story, running over the past few years.

He mentioned the almost unlimited markets that may be opened in the Orient for our dried apples, in the shipments of which from the Pacific northwest there has already been a great growth in the past three or four years.

He suggested that the Willamette valley might furnish great quantities of dried apples to supply the demand.

Why not? Why not get under way a campaign for more driers for the Salem district?

The Wheat-a-lon factory is the newest member of the industrial family of Salem to bid for popular favor, and with a field for great growth. Another payroll. Another rallying point for the solid growth of Salem.

POLICE PROBE STORY TOLD BY FEYERABEND

ous, he is said to have admitted. Confronted with statements that he did not deny, Feyerabend not only admitted that he had not followed the route that he had previously outlined, but said that he himself had become lost in the rugged section to the west of Crater Rock.

That Feyerabend's mis-statements might have been responsible for the death of young Brownlee was the opinion of Woyzandt and Lenz. Had they possessed the true information as to the movements of the two young climbers on New Year's Day, they might have found Brownlee alive, they said.

As a result of the information obtained from Feyerabend, the hunt for the body of the missing youth will take of fresh vigor tomorrow. After hearing Feyerabend's story, mountaineers are convinced that the missing youth wandered off to the left of Crater Rock and pitched over some of the high precipices in that vicinity.

A will, which Brownlee made at Feyerabend's suggestion, and which gave to the latter the sum of $210, was the cause of the reopening of the case. This will, coming into the possession of Brownlee's father, was shown to Sergeant Griffin. The will was written just before the two youths started on their trip. Feyerabend told the officers that it was at his joking suggestion that Brownlee made out the will, wrapped it

Canada Introduces School Houses on Wheels

Canada is introducing "school houses on wheels" in sparsely settled districts. Where the population does not justify the erection of a school, the government sends a specially equipped railway coach with a teacher. At each stopping place, pupils come for lessons and are assigned home work for a few days or weeks and the car is moved on, to return later. Photo above shows school in session on a car.

with his keys in rough paper and wrote on the outside: "Property of Leslie Brownlee as long as he lives."

Brownlee carried three endowment policies for $1,000 each and one accident policy for $5,000. This insurance was made out to his parents or his estate. The policy for $5,000 expired a half hour after the youth disappeared.

Bits For Breakfast

Stabilize the industry—

The gooseberry industry—

By getting jam and jelly plants, and by extending the markets for canned gooseberries.

This is well worth doing, for it will make Salem the gooseberry capital of the world, as it is already the canned gooseberry center of the United States.

With our big yields of superior gooseberries, there is a chance here to build up a gigantic industry, joining the producing industry on the land with the manufacturing and merchandising industry in the city.

The junta that was looking for a chance to scuttle the industrial accident law has counted noses and found a hopeless case. That is well.

The fish wheel corsairs will no doubt, on checking up, find themselves in the same hopeless case. Which is complimentary to the membership of the legislature.

"Rain" was a strong play. A problem play. It taught several lessons. Some of them true and some of them false. None of them either true or false as applied to everybody everywhere. That is, no rule of either weakness or virtue will apply to all the members of any class.

The way for Salem to grow fast and solidly is to get more and more and more factories using up the products of our industries on the land. That will mean new money every year, brought from near and far places. That is better than a gold mine; it is a prosperity that will never pinch out.

Accident Reports Differ Widely When Recorded

Two accident reports on file in the office of Sheriff Oscar D. Bower refer to the same case, but differ very widely. The man hit reported that the woman who hit him was going too fast. Had she not been going too fast the accident would not have happened.

The woman wrote that the man driver failed to use traffic signals, and that may be taken as her version of the cause of the accident. The accident happened Monday morning at North Commercial and Gaines streets.

Willard H. Wertz, Salem attorney, says on his report that Mrs. Homer Goulet was traveling at an "unlawful speed." Mrs. Goulet, on her way to her place in the jury box in the circuit court, does not mention anything about speed. Instead she wrote that "Mr. Wertz turned west without holding out his hand."

Rotunda Ramblings

Hal Hoss, newspaper man and now private secretary to Governor Patterson, says he is getting acquainted with the routine of his office; but most of this "getting acquainted" is done in the wee small hours. People just naturally flock into the office to see the governor or the secretary.

Representative Arthur McPhillips of Yamhill county is proud of the fact that he is a democrat coming from a supposedly republican county. He says that he has very little to introduce this session and that he wants to keep the number of bills adopted to the minimum believing that there are too many laws now. In fact "we are lawed to death" said Mr. McPhillips.

A number of civic classes usually attend the sessions of the legislature in order to see first hand how the laws are ground out of the hopper. The first class to appear on the scene this year was one from the McMinnville high school. They were escorted here by their instructor R. W. Fisher and enjoyed very much visits with Secretary Kozler and Governor Patterson in addition to the regular routine work of the two houses.

S. A. Miller of Umatilla county is an old timer on the job and proves to be a regular watch dog in the house for his part of the state. In speaking about conditions in Umatilla county he said that they had been hard hit for the last four years and that something must be done at once to aid in the marketing of the fruit in that section.

R. H. Chapler of the Lumbermen Western Forestry association is a faithful attendant at the sessions this year and is spending some time in working for reforestation plans.

A stranger to the legislature sessions was heard to remark yesterday that there seemed to be an unusually large number of young ladies roaming around the state house. "This a fact and there appear to be more stenographers, would be stenographers and other office seekers than there are legislators."

C. C. Chapman, editor of the Oregon Voter, has established headquarters near the entrance to the hall of the house of representatives. Mr. Chapman has been through many sessions and is well known to a number of the legislators. With his horned rimmed spectacles pushed high on his forehead he is a marked man at all times.

Ex-governor Oswald West was seen around the lobby at the state house yesterday. He was extremely busy as usual and expressed himself as liking the game of politics.

Many old time lobbyists are on the job again this session. Indications point to the fact that there will be more here this year than ever before. The majority of them are extremely busy even at this early date.

BUDGETS FALL BEFORE WAYS AND MEANS AX

would not be adverse to abolishing the board of inspectors of child labor, of which Mrs. Millie Trumbull of Portland is secretary. No action was taken on the budget prepared by this board at last night's meeting.

Reports submitted to the ways and means committee indicated that it has approximately $5,000,000 available to meet the demands of the budget requirements. It was agreed that this amount would not be sufficient to cover the demands, and that reductions would have to be made wherever possible.

The budget of the executive department which had been authorized in the amount of $42,000 by the state budget commission was reduced to $40,000, while the budget of the secretary of state was cut from $105,620 to $100,000. The budget of the motor vehicle department, certificate of title division, was authorized in the amount of $53,240. The full amount of the appropriation of the state treasurer which aggregated $56,895 also was allowed.

The budget of the state board of control which was authorized in the amount of $35,754 by the state budget commission was reduced to $32,000, including $1650 for a new automobile. The appropriation of the budget division of the state board of control was cut from $6000 to $5000.

For the transportation of insane alien and non-resident public charges the committee allowed $45,000 or $8100 less than had been approved by the budget commission.

Other budget expenditures authorized by the committee for the years 1927 and 1928 at last night's meeting follow: Emergency board, $300 requested; $200 allowed.

State printing board, $15,000 requested; $12,500 allowed. Legislative assembly, $125,160 requested; $125,160 allowed.

Attorney general, $60,550 requested; $55,000 allowed. Supreme court, $153,200 requested; $153,200 allowed.

Supreme court library, $25,000 requested; $20,000 allowed. Traveling expenses circuit judges, $230,500 requested; $230,500 allowed.

Salaries of district attorney and deputies, $150,000 requested; $150,000 allowed. State tax commission, $24,800 requested; $24,800 allowed.

Oregon school for blind, $56,499 requested; $50,000 allowed. State superintendent of schools, $50,100 requested; $47,500 allowed.

Textbook commission, $1000 requested; $500 allowed. Board of higher curricula, $600 requested; $450 allowed.

Oregon state library, $115,045 requested; $75,000 allowed.

SORE THROAT Gargle with warm salt water—then apply over throat—

VICKS VAPORUB Over 17 Million Jars Used Yearly

Oregon blue book, $7500 requested; $4000 allowed. Oregon Historical society, $20,000 requested; $15,000 allowed. Livestock sanitary board, $55,512 requested; $50,000 allowed. Predatory animal hunters' fund, $35,000 requested; $40,000 allowed.

Board of horticulture, $27,500 requested; $20,000 allowed. The most drastic reduction was made in the budget for the state library. The budget commission had recommended an appropriation of $115,045 for this institution, but this was cut to $75,000.

Action in connection with the appropriation for the state school for the deaf was deferred pending investigation of the institution by a committee. The report of this committee probably will be filed with the committee at its next meeting Monday night.

Consideration of capital outlays, such as new buildings at the state institutions, was continued until a future meeting of the committee. Pending next Monday night's meeting of the ways and means committee a number of the state institutions will be inspected. Considerable complaint was voiced at the meeting in connection with the apparent increase in the salaries of stenographers and other state employes.

NORMAL SCHOOL REGENT ASK FOR APPROPRIATION
