was his theory. He said that he believed it would be found to increase the attendance 10 per cent to 20 per cent.

Geo. W. Danneman of Corvallis, spoke against free textbooks. Fifty per cent of the taxes collected in this state are spent on the educational program of the state, he stated, and argued that to use any money to buy free text books would be shifting that much more burden onto the taxpayer, instead of equalizing it. Taxpayers are spending about all they can at the present time is Mr. Danneman's belief, and parents should assume that responsibility toward their children when the state is doing so much already. The humiliation caused poor parents is no consideration whatever, in his opinion, if the parents are interested in the education of their child.

Mr. Danneman suggested that the districts might operate an exchange of used textbooks on some basis, and in this way use the books until they were worn out.

"He should know whether he is getting 60 cents worth of meat for his dollar, or whether he is getting a dollar and a quarter's worth. The only way he can know this is to have all meats marked. This can be done quickly. They have a rolling rubber stamp which will mark a whole carcass in 20 seconds time, so you cannot cut a half inch steak that isn't marked."

WHEELER DEMANDS STAND ON POLICY

Senator Urges Congress to Decide for or Against Administration

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—American activities in Nicaragua were debated briefly again today in the senate, with Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, challenging the senate to take a stand for or against the administration's policy.

The challenge passed without formal notice, the senate turning back to consideration of the pending fire discussion in which several senators on the republican side had defended the administration's program as the only one that could have been pursued.

American marines came in for attack and defense during the debate, Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, praising them and Senator King, democrat, Utah, interrupting to ask what he thought of the fact that from a dozen to twenty marines had been sent back from Nicaragua for imprisonment in this country after conviction by court martial on charges of murder.

He explained that he was referring to the previous American expeditionary force to Nicaragua, withdrawn in 1925.

In a carefully prepared address on the Nicaraguan question, Senator Wheeler assailed both President Coolidge and the state department, declaring that essential facts had been withheld in the message which the chief executive recently sent to congress.

The Montanan also asserted that American intervention was really to protect the investments of Brown Brothers and J. and W. Seligman, New York bankers. He declared Adolfo Diaz had been "washed" into the presidency by this country three different times and now was "safely pinned" there by the bayonets of American marines.

Lawrence Dennis, American charge at Managua, was characterized as the "king-maker" of the state department in the Central American republic and Diaz himself was called a betrayer of his people and a looter of the public treasury.

Wheeler's failure to take the stand is considered an outgrowth of his having been refused a bill of particulars, and a desire on the part of his counsel to learn, in court, of what he is specifically accused. In the last two days, as he sat frequently stiffly nervously at his high tuff collar, he has learned.

Some of the testimony of Mrs. Browning caused her such embarrassment yesterday that she broke down three times. Today her manner was easier, and she was not called on to repeat any acts of alleged cruelty in her relationship with the rector.

Just prior to the adjournment counsel for both sides stipulated in court that disclosure of the financial status of the wealthy plaintiff be held in abeyance, so far as testimony is considered, until the close of the case.

Mrs. Browning's chief counsel added a clause which will permit financial investigation should the judge desire to grant alimony, even if he refuses the decree of separation.

Adjournment until Monday was granted on two points in Mack's motion. He said he desired until ating the third floor of the Lincoln building, would be put in effect, was passed by the board. Under present conditions, the district is unable to move any pupils from the Lincoln school, it was agreed.

The board purchased fire extinguishers to be placed in the boiler rooms of four school buildings. It also voted to pay for a piano that the senior high school students were purchasing for the women's physical education department.

Miss Carolyn Vaeretti was elected as a teacher in the Grant school. She is a graduate of Monmouth normal, and has been teaching since the first of the year, taking a position vacated by a teacher who left to get married.

Oregon Senate Observations

By LANE MORLEY

"A finer and more fit body of men have never sat in the senate of the state of Oregon." This remark has been heard again and again by visitors, lobbyist and the members themselves. It really is a fine, dignified, intelligent looking bunch of men; any state in the Union could well be proud of them.

The senators, including the clerks and secretaries, seem to be just like one big family, everybody having a good time, everybody friendly, each one trying to do his or her part as best he can. It seems to be easy to get acquainted, no friction, no one complaining everybody working with a few exceptions. The senators say, its strange what a good time everybody has in Salem during the legislative session.

It is a great sacrifice on the part of a great many senators to come to Salem for forty days of law making, but after working and fighting together, arguing and debating the affairs of state, friendships are formed that are never to be broken, making the sacrifice as far as money is concerned.

I have also observed that, contrary to what the very large per cent of the people believe, the thirty senators as a whole represent a hard working body of able and conscientious men. Their days work will no doubt make an average of at least fifteen hours per day, a great many will work until the midnight hours.

The real job and the hard work is no doubt done when the rest of us are snuggled away cozily in our beds at home. The committee meetings, the drawing of bills, the investigations, the eternal mass of figures and statistics that are necessary in drafting some of these bills, are enough to rack the brain of Caesar. At any rate just at the time the people are criticizing the legislators for not doing anything, that is the time they are doing the best and the hardest work. Now the time when the general public thinks the work begins, that without a doubt is the easiest time of all and enjoyed to the fullest extent by most of those participating. It is easy compared to the first part of the session when it seems as if nothing at all was being accomplished.

CARKIN SPONSORS DRASTIC RESOLUTION

Passage Will Eliminate Two Score Extra Clerks and Stenographers

Led by Speaker John Carkin, the house passed house resolution 14 in the Wednesday session, calling for a reduction of the superfluous clerks and stenographers who far outnumbered the legislators themselves.

The resolution covers two clauses, the transfer of the duty of mailing bills to the office of the secretary of state, where it is thought the job can be handled with greater efficiency, and the dismissal of all unnecessary help in the various house and senate committees with direct attention paid to the committees on engrossed and enrolled bills.

Action at this time is due to the apparent ignoring of Speaker Carkin's plea of a decrease in clerical help, which was made the first week of the session. According to the plan, if the resolution is put into effect, elimination proceedings will commence the first of next week, taking in consideration the necessity of the help and their value, as shown in the past few weeks. Members of the senate expect to act on the bill today, which will decide the fate of approximately 35 or 40 extra helpers.

YAKIMA, Wash., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Organization of an all-northwest fruit exchange, with existing cooperatives and others to be formed, was launched in the closing session of the state fruit economic conference held under the auspices of the Washington State college in Yakima late today. Five hundred growers attended.

The general plan of the Pacific northwest fruit growers' commission of 1924 was approved and a committee consisting of H. C. Bohke, Grandview; E. H. Zickler, Buena, Wash.; William McGonagle, Selah, Wash., and E. W. Simonson, M. Rumohr and S. W. WORK ON LESLIE SCHOOL RESUMED

Construction work on the Leslie junior high school building was resumed Wednesday after being delayed for several days on account of bad weather. Concrete cannot be poured until Monday at least, it was reported to the board of education Wednesday night by Lyle Bartholomew of the firm of James & Bartholomew, architects in charge.

No indication of the rumored difficulty between the board and the architects was apparent in the discussion of construction progress.

Bartholomew displayed a large relief map of the school property with a replica of the new building. This map showed the proposed athletic field behind the building. Finances for improving this field are not now provided. It is situated in a natural depression, so that little excavation will be necessary to complete it. At one side and end, is a raise which accommodates itself to the purpose of providing seats.

Bartholomew is spending several days each week in Salem, inspecting the work.

Singers Will Entertain at Baptist Church Tonight

Frank and James McCravy, noted singers for the phonograph recording studios, will entertain at the Baptist revival tonight. It is true that James is not in this part of the country, but Frank will sing, and some of the records that the two have made will be played. Evangelist "Big Jim" Kramer has designated this as family night.

Wednesday evening the church was well filled as usual. Rev. Kramer's subject was "Some Nuts for Infidels to Crack," and he refuted the standard arguments of skeptics. He had issued an invitation for doubters to come and ask questions, but none appeared.
