that he desired assurance of the medical profession that it would not be smothered. Dr. Hall declared that he could not make any such promise, but thought the bill would receive careful consideration.

At this juncture of the discussion some person directed a lefthanded jab at the drugless healing profession.

"Jesus Christ was a healer." retaliated Mr. McMichaels, "but he would have stood a fat chance before the Oregon medical board." Dentists, optometrists, ostheopaths chiropractics and a number of other professions registered complaint against the original bill, but said they were satisfied when amendments were accepted exempting them from the provisions of the proposed act.

Dr. Dean of Portland objected cording to the report compiled by to that part of the bill which prohibited advertising of secret methods of treating the ill. This protest was overcome by amending long. For North Salem Lots-Until the bill so as to provide that the tions would be reported to the out of existence.

Louise Palmer Weber of Portland, in closing the debate on behalf of the public, declared that the bill as amended was much like the mother-hubbard. "It covers es nothing," said Mrs. Weber. Mrs. Weber complimented Dr. Hall for his fairness in accepting the many amendments. It was in all professions, and it would have been well if the sponsors of the bill had refused to accept any amendments. She said the bill should have gone before the legislature as originally drafted.

"As the bill is at the present ime," said Mrs. Weber, "the teeth have been extracted and it appears to me as though the substitute plate would work poorly." Senator Staples let it be known during the debate that he would request all state activities in the category of the state medical board to contribute 10 per cent of their receipts to the general fund.
