Man Responsible for Senate Restaurants Finds Feeding Solons Hard

WASHINGTON. - (AP-Senators have as many, if not more, differences in their Capitol restaurant as they do in committees or in debate on the floor of their chamber. Home influences appear to follow them wherever they go. New Englander, Westerner. Southerner, each spurns the dishes most relished by the others.

The job of striking a balance among these conflicting appetites falls to the lot of Joseph I. Langer, manager of the six senate restaurants, who finds it harder to meet the requirements of the 96 members than to cater to the multitudes of visitors that pass through the restaurants daily,

Those multitudes are a widely fluctuating quantity. One day he is called on to serve only a few hundred patrons, while the next day he may have to feed two or three thousand. He solves the problem thus presented by closely studying the news of the senate's proceedings. If a popular subject is up for discussion, he knows that a large crowd will visit the galleries and will require his ministrations.

It's possible for him to take reasonable chances in trying to satisfy the public patrons, but that is not the case with the senators. They are, so to speak, "The boss,," and during his years of experience he has made it his business to know their preferences.

The senate of the United States immediately toog informal but vigorous action, and bean soup was restored to the menu, permanently. At present, 20 gallons are made-and consumed-every day.

The ancient institution of prevaricators, with headquarters at Moncrabeau, in the south of France, was active until 1850. It held contests and awarded titles of capacity as liars.

There is a "Truth-Stone" in this town of 2000 population on which is inscribed the authority given Academy members "to lie in all places but without harming anyone but Truth."

The Society of Gascon Watchers has an annual story telling contest in the late spring, and it is at this festival of imagination that they intend to revive the Academy with its highest standards of vivid speech.

Baron Muenchausen's worldwide reputation sprang from the British publication of his adventures, but he might have been only a second fiddle in the orchestra if he had tried to lie in France. "Politicians and other ordinary liars" are ineligible among the Gascon story tellers for their bright brains soar on fantastic subtitles, imagery, harmless super-exaggerations of entertaining yarns. They. like Daudet's noted "Tartarin of Tarascon," frequently come to believe the fairy tales they tell, so earnest are they and so full of enthusiasm.

Mysterious Blasts Wreck Homes; Puzzle Kansas City Police

Iwo mysterious explosions within three days on the north side of Ransas City, Mo., have terrorized residents of the neighborhood and furnished police with a problem. The first explosions wrecked seven buildings and injured several persons. The second blast occurring during a blizzard, wrecked several buildings and drove 30 persons into the cold. One theory is that the explosions are part of a plot against families in the vicinity. Photo shows the damage done by the second blast.
