ter, a motion picture house. They were refused entrance by police on guard at the place and after several minutes wait moved on the Majestic theater several blocks away. Meantime a special detail of police had been called and met the celebrators at the entrance of the Majestic. The students attempted to rush the entrance and the officers immediately began bombarding them with the tear gas bombs.

A general fight ensued, during which bricks and other missiles were thrown. The disturbance lasted for more than an hour and was concluded when the students and others were driven from the district.

After the fracas police said no action would be taken and that the whole affair will be dropped. None of those injured suffered serious hurts and all were able to go to their homes after first aid treatment in downtown drug stores.

All business houses in the section where the disturbance occurred were forced to close up, however, because of the tumes from the tear bombs.

tories, were reported to have been destroyed.

Dispatches from the seaport of Kobe, which was described as the center of the quake in one report, said that a gangplank collapsed while a number of American tourists were boarding a steamer during the tremors and that some were injured.

The extent of the earthquake area could not be definitely determined because of the fragmentary and sometimes contradictory reports received.

Some of the accounts from the area received by the Tokyo Press indicated that the casualties were numerous and the destruction great, but confirmation of this was lacking. Serious fires were reported to have broken out in several of the towns affected by the quake.

Among the towns reporting damage were Miyazu, on the western coast and neighboring villages. The region of Tajima, also on the western coast, suffered heavily.

Dispatches stated that many houses collapsed, one railway bridge fell, and several tunnels were damaged.

The quake first was felt shortly after 6 o'clock last evening, and continued with a horizontal motion for three minutes. It was plainly felt in Tokyo, scene of the great earthquake of 1923, but caused no damage, although creating considerable alarm.

The partial collapse of a motion picture theater were reported by the Nippon Shimbun Rengo news agency at Osaka and several persons were hurt by the debris.

Prefectural reports from Osaka early today placed the dead at 11 and the injured at 92, with four factories destroyed and numerous houses caved in.

Numerous casualties in towns near Miyazu were reported by the newspaper Asahi Shimbun, which said that most of the country people remained out of doors throughout the night.

LONDON, March 7.—(AP)—The Daily Mail's correspondent describes today's earthquake in central Japan as the most severe in the Osaka-Kobe district since 1900, but reports no casualties.

The correspondent says that many houses were unroofed and that some collapsed and that railroad service between Nagoya and the sea was interrupted.

Reports that the British steamship California, which is on a world cruise, had listed at her pier in Kobe were received from Tokyo by the Daily Express, which said that a woman had been drowned.

TOKYO, March 8 (2:40 a. m.)—(AP)—Eleven persons were killed and 92 injured by yesterday's quake in the city of Osaka, say reports from the prefectural police received here early this morning. Four factories and numerous houses were destroyed.

Unconfirmed dispatches to Asahi Shimbun report that the towns of Kaetsu, Yamada and Iwataki, near the city of Miyazu, were destroyed, the region being that in which the earthquake was heaviest. Numerous casualties were reported in this district.

Most of the country people remained outdoors throughout the night, frequent shocks being felt at intervals.

A destroyer in Miyazu bay was reported to have landed bluejackets to maintain order.

The last earthquake of moment in Japan occurred last August, the center being about 11 miles seaward from Tokyo. This quake was strong enough to put the lighting system out of commission temporarily, to burst water mains and to interrupt communications. Minor quakes have occurred at intervals since.

The earthquake of 1923, which ranked as one of the most destructive on record, caused enormous losses. The official death toll was placed at 99,331, with 103,733 injured and 43,476 missing. The fire which followed the quake was responsible for many of the casualties and for a great preponderance of the property destruction.

The losses were estimated at not far from $5,000,000,000.

The principal center of this quake was under Sagami bay to the south of Tokyo, where it was found later that the sea bed had been lifted in some places and depressed in others.

dian. A sort of a "come-on" for Mr. Bomber to take advantage of the poor over-worked cop who appeared to sleep on the job. The other nerve centers of the system were vividly alive, however. The officers divided their tricks into two hour watches.

The detail put itself under the strictest routine. Food was served at stated intervals. The policemen who were relieved arranged it so that they could walk out of the church with the congregation as often as possible, so as not to excite suspicion. At other times they appeared as worshippers.

It finally worked to a swift climax. The sleepy policeman yawned, remarked to a passerby that it was a hard life and then stole away for a fake cat-nap. The slinking bomber came. The look-outs stiffened at their peepholes and gripped their guns. The bomber pattered like a rabbit up to the entrance steps of the church, deposited his sheaf of dynamite sticks and lighted his fuse. Two stern police voices called to him to halt, but he turned and tried to run. Two police guns cracked, and the bomber dropped dead.

Once more a police gun barked and a man across the street fell desperately wounded. He was Celestus Eklund, supposed lookout for the bomber.

The watch of months was at an end, its purpose accomplished beyond the hopes of those who had maintained it.

Hundreds passed through the morgue today to gaze upon the dead bomber, but no one could identify him. At the hospital Eklund was asked many questions by the police, but he maintained his innocence, saying that he liked all churches too well to wish to destroy any one of them. A Bible seems to be his chief possession.

Chief O'Brien said today that the men who served on the police detail had volunteered for the job. "I told them that they were facing death; that they were running the risk of being blown into eternity," the chief said. "Not a man backed out."

GARDEN CLUB MEETS

Colored Slides Show Flower Cultivation Throughout World

One hundred-fifty members of the Salem Golden club met last night at the chamber of commerce auditorium in the most enthusiastic meeting in years.

J. C. Bacher, president of the Swiss Floral company in Portland addressed the club, speaking on the cultivation of flowers, and showing nearly 100 slides on flower cultivation throughout the world. Many of the slides showed the different varieties of primroses in especially fine colorwork.

Mr. Bacher has originated two varieties of petunias known as the "Pride of Portland" and the "Purple Elk." Through his efforts the Swiss Floral company has become one of the leaders in the northwest.

The Garden club is now 14 years old but only in recent months has any outstanding interest been taken by so large a group, the number attending last night being very gratifying to those in charge.

Keys submitted figures to show that his companies' bids were lower than the prices paid elsewhere in the valley. Winslow countered by claiming that the Portland, Gravel Co. prices were 55 cents for gravel and $1.45 for sand, as against the local bidders' prices of $1.50 and $1.60.

The motion to reject all bids was opposed by Councilmen Hal D. Patton, S. E. Purvine and C. C. Engstrom, on the ground of fairness to the outside bidder; and when it came to a vote, Councilmen George J. Wenderoth and B. B. Herrick voted with them. Councilmen W. W. Rosebraugh, W. H. Dancy and Paul V. Johnson were absent.

None of the members spoke in favor of the recommendation, but Councilmen Watson Townsend, L. J. Simeral, Byron Brunk, E. G. Grabenhorst, Harry W. Hawkins and J. E. Galloway voted for it.

The council accepted the bid of the Chas. K. Spaulding Logging Co. on cement for street work, and that of D. A. Larmer for hauling the cement.

The council acted favorably on petitions for paving North 13th street from Frickey to Nebraska, South Church from Howard to Oxford, and Laurel from South to Highland.

Councilman L. J. Simeral introduced a new plan for street lighting, under which the candle power of some of the present corner lights would be reduced, and new lights would be placed on some of the corners not now lighted. This was laid on the table for fuller consideration.

The zoning commission's favorable report on a petition to open an alley in block 33, North Salem addition, was adopted. The residents are planning to deed a 16-foot strip to the city for alley purposes.

The commission's unfavorable report on H. V. Pendleton's petition for a curb gasoline pump at 271 Chemeketa was upheld.

Bids were received on the fire siren and turret nozzle which are to be purchased for the fire department. They were referred to

MAY VOTE ON PURCHASE

Whether or not the voters of Salem are to decide the question of purchasing the water system at the time of the special state election June 28, will be decided at Monday night's council meeting.

This and other city issues will be thrashed out for possible inclusion on the ballot, at a meeting of the special committee appointed for the purpose recently, it was reported.

Councilman Hal D. Patton urged that the council at least consider putting the water question on the ballot, as the city has already filed on water claims and secured an appraisal of the present system.

Elsinore Theater "The Auctioneer" Fox Films version of the stage success in which David Warfield achieved his first fame under the supervision of David Belasco, which shows at the Elsinore theater today, March 8 for the last time, with George Sidney in the title role, has an unusual history behind it. The plot revolves around Simon Levi, who, coming to America from Russia, makes a small fortune in his store on the East Side of New York. He invests most of his fortune in a business, backing Dick Eagen, fiancé of his adopted daughter Ruth, whom the Levis adore.

Through false promises and representations of Groode, partner in the business, Levi loses his money and is forced to go back to his old work of a street peddler.

However, he has lost none of his acuteness and the shrewd auctioneer outwits the schemers and gets his fortune back intact, establishing a future for Ruth and Dick at the same time.

Bootleggers, crooks, cabaret girls and other members of the underworld figure quite prominently in "The Noose," the drama to be presented here at the Elsinore theater, March 9. The play is by Willard Mack whose ability as a builder of plays made David Belasco place him under contract to write several dramas for him.

One of the latter "The Dove" had a phenomenal run in New York and Chicago. "The Noose" is now the outstanding success of the New York season. It has filled the Hudson theater at every performance since last October and is likely to remain there for a year to come. A magazine story by H. H. Van Loan furnished Mr. Mack with the idea of "The Noose."

Its plot deals with a youth whose parents forgot him in infancy and who is here found in the company of bootleggers. Twisted with his illegitimacy by one of the bootleggers he kills him. There is also a deeper motive for the deed. The young man is arrested, tried and condemned to death. He is reprieved at the last hour and the curtain descends after a dramatic scene in which the secret of his birth and the motive for killing the bootlegger are revealed. The play has been staged by William Holden, who was sent to Los Angeles by the author for that purpose and who will play one of the leading roles in the piece. The cast comprises more than twenty players, an unusually large company for a dramatic performance.

"Silken Shackles" will be the attraction at the Elsinore theater for one day, March 10.

Oregon Theater "Don Mike" will be the picture at the Oregon theater for three days, March 8, 9 and 10. This picture features Fred Thompson and his famous horse "Silver King."

"Silken Shackles" featuring Irene Rich will be shown at the Oregon for one day, March 11.

Marie Prevost and Charles Gerard will appear on the screen in "For Wives Only" at the Oregon for three days, March 12, 13 and 14.

Capitol Theater When the Armistice was signed, the whole world cheered—and gave a long, pent-up sigh of relief. At least almost the whole world did.

But there were a few, a very few men who were just the least bit disappointed and disgusted to think they never had an opportunity to get into the argument. It is about these few that Edward Sedgwick spun his yarn, "Tin Hats," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture coming to the Capitol theater for four days, March 8, 9, 10 and 11.

The story concerns three doughboys, one a rich man's son, played by Conrad Nagel, another a New York yegg, drafted into the service, played by George Cooper, and the third the American son of a St. Louis Dutch brewer, played by Bert Roach. These three arrive in the front line trenches just in time to hear the referee announce that "That's all there is, there isn't any more."

However, the plot thickens when they are sent into Germany with the Army of Occupation, and their subsequent adventures make the war look like the Saturday Evening Strawberry Festival, back in Pawtucket.

work being undertaken by the courses committee in reconstructing the curriculum. Many changes are being considered by the committee and a tentative program will soon be offered the faculty for constructive criticism and suggestions. Teacher-training is the principle object of the normal school and it is the desire of the committee to offer the students the most properly balanced course possible. The meeting closed with a general discussion of various phases and problems of school work confronting the instructors.

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickly by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.
