WHEAT WALK

CHICAGO, Mar. 7.—(AP)—Favorable conditions for the new domestic crop, together with price breaks at Winnipeg, led to weakness here late today. Despite an early advance, Chicago wheat closed heavy, 3-8c to 3-4c net lower, with corn unchanged to 3-6@31-32c higher and oats unchanged to 1-8c up.

MARKET STAGNANT

PORTLAND, March 7.—(AP)—The onion market is stagnant with no outside demand and values are slowly receding locally. A few sales are being made for shipping purposes at $2.50 per cwt to the growers.

The cauliflower and broccoli markets are strong. The crop is developing very slowly at Roseburg because of the cold nights. Receipts from California are showing much better quality and top prices of $2.50 per crate are being received here.

Receipts of lettuce are showing poorer quality, but the market is advancing at shipping point, so values are stepping up a little here and would go higher for top notch stock.

VALLEY WOOLS ARE HANDLED AT LOSS

Leading Boston Dealer Attempts to Clear Up Some False Impressions

Clifford W. Brown, prominent Salem buyer and dealer in wool, has received a letter from Clifton C. Brown, president of Hyder & Brown, Co., Boston, Mass., one of the largest wool dealers in the United States, which will be of interest to many readers in the Willamette valley. The parts of the letter that should interest our sheep breeders follow:

"In reply to your letter of the 14th wherein you enclose clipping from your Oregon paper quoting Hugh Sproat as saying that according to Mr. Sproat any contracting that is being done in your section at 28 to 30 cents is out and out robbery. We wish to take exception to this statement, nor can we agree with Mr. Sproat that the thing for the wool grower to do is to consign to the wool commission houses mentioned in his article.

"Our reasons for taking exception to his statement can be easily analyzed by simply looking back at the records of those who consigned during the past two years. Ask the grower who was refused 40 cents for his wool and offered it, and then shipped some on consignment to Portland, what his opinion is. Hundreds of thousands of pounds of wool were shipped to Portland and grower refused 42 cents. How much will he get today for the same wool, and how much of it has been sold for as much as the grower was offered? The public never hears of the losses the grower takes by consigning, but in the spring a campaign is started to publish all the flattering reports possible to get the grower to again consign, and we think it is high time for someone to give the public the true facts in the case.

"When Mr. Sproat states that offering a grower 30 cents a pound net cash for his wool is out and out robbery, we think that he does not know all the facts of the case. We understand that somewhere between 50 and 60 million pounds of the coming clip of wool has already been sold by the wool grower at around 30 cents, and it doesn't seem possible that all of these growers can be wrong. We think they are right, as they, no doubt, have learned their lesson from past experiences.

"For years articles have been published in local papers portraying the wool dealer as a robber, and painting him as black as possible, all of which is not true. While the wool merchant is a middleman, he performs a variety of most essential services, and is a very important factor in the wool industry at large. He sends buyer direct to the grower of the wool, offers them spot cash for their wool, shipping same to his warehouse where it is graded and classified and sold to textile mills on credit. Many mills are unable to finance their wool requirements throughout the year, and very few mills buy all the grades that the farmers grow, as their demand is possibly for only one or two grades. The wool dealer knows the demand, which the wool grower does not, and obviously fills a very important position in the industry.

"If one believes that the wool dealer is robbing the poor grower, all he has to do is to look at the casualty list of the Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Chicago dealers, and he will change his mind. Not only have many of the large and small firms been obliged to close their doors and re-trench, but a few have committed suicide. The wool industry is struggling hard to keep its head above water. The dealers are not the only ones who have suffered, but the mills are struggling and doing their utmost to exist. We haven't the time, nor will space permit, to give you a list of the mills that have failed during the past few years. The wool industry is very hard hit, and we are doing our level best to save the industry and encourage the production of wool. Therefore, we hardly think it is fair and just for Mr. Sproat to picture us as robbers, or to say that we are stealing the wool from the growers and making enormous profits.

"The sensible thing for Mr. Sproat to do is not to criticize the grower for accepting cash for his wool instead of waiting for six to eight months and gambling on the future, but to educate the grower to produce better wool, to grow sheep that will produce wool most desired, such as Lincoln sheep produce, to pack their wool in better condition, and not to shear sheep while the wool is wet or dew on the grass. These are the fundamental things that in the end will help to net the farmer more money, securing for him better prices for his commodity. Does Mr. Sproat know that fully 30 to 40 per cent of the valley wools are handled each year at cost or a loss—wools that are poorly packed through ignorance on the part of the grower. Let us paint the picture just as it is; give the public the facts; not condemn or criticize, but try to improve through knowledge and truth."

C. Free, W. A. Free and A. E. Free of Salem. Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. from the Rigdon mortuary, Rev. I. J. Woodman of Portland officiating. Interment in City View cemetery.

AFTERMATH OF GLEE SHOW FREAK BETS

Football Star Rolls Peanut With His Nose; Ducking in Cold Mill Creek

Aftermaths of the freshman glee, won Saturday night by the senior class, played a prominent role at Willamette university Monday. The features included a chilly bath in the mill stream, indulged in by the boys of the freshman class; and the repetition at the chapel hour of the winning song by the seniors, and of specialty stunts by the sophomores and freshmen, who ranked third and fourth.

The sophomores marched to the stage to music which sounded suspiciously like a wedding march, and sang a parody on their song. The freshmen's stunt was even more striking. Their "dead song" was brought into the chapel in a coffin, appropriately fashioned out of a malted milk carton, and followed by the class dressed in deep mourning, marching to the strains of a well known dirge. Their parody included a resolve to keep on fighting and to win next year. Besides the freshman's dip in the mill stream, numerous other students paid the penalty of too much confidence in their class song. Kenneth Lawson, president of the junior class, wore a West Point uniform which a senior would have worn had the result been different, to all of his classes Monday; and Eldred Cobb, walked to Turner and back. Harold McKenzie, football star, rolled a peanut with his nose from the front of Waller hall to the entrance of Lausanne.

One Sigma Tau fraternity member slept in the bathtub Saturday night, and other students paid a variety of unusual penalties for losing.
