tion could be reduced by this hence. He urged the county assessors not to allow this amendment to prejudice them in the administration of the tax law.

Earl Fisher, state tax commissioner, said the new law was the most constructive piece of legislation enacted in Oregon in many years. "This is Oregon's first attempt to equalize property assessments," said Mr. Fisher. "It gives to the assessors adequate machinery, and the enforcement of the act is now a matter of administration."

The state tax commissioner made it plain that it was not the purpose of the state tax commission to reassess property in the various counties, but to cooperate with the assessors to the end that their work would be made easier.

Probably the most important matter considered at the conference was that of adopting a blank report which must be filed with the county assessors by both incorporated and unincorporated businesses. This report must show the true cash value of the property to be assessed, together with all accounts both receivable and payable. Other information for tax-making purposes also will be demanded in these reports. The reports shall be filed with the county assessors under oath.

It was said that these reports would assist the county assessors materially in determining the value of merchandise stocks and property which is now invisible. In cases where county assessors are unable to obtain a true statement of property for assessment purposes they may appeal to the state tax commission for assistance.
