

OLD WILLAMETTE'S GRABS IN BANQUET

The Annual Affair at Portland Was Full of Enthusiasm for Old School

The late edition of the Oregonian of yesterday had the following concerning the annual alumni banquet at Portland on Friday evening:

A host of welcome reminiscences of Willamette university, reminiscences that extended back to near the beginnings when the institution was founded 80-odd years ago by a missionary band at Salem headed by Jason Lee, came flooding back into the memories of the 150 graduates of the university who gathered for the annual banquet of the Portland Willamette clubs, both older and younger groups, at the First Methodist church last night.

It was a most representative group that attended the affair, ranging from J. A. Carter of the class of 1868 and C. B. Moores of the class of 1870 down to the most recent graduates of the institution. The banquet also was attended by alumni from neighboring cities.

In contrast to the thoughts of the past to which many of the alumni turned, Dr. Carl Gregg Doney, president of the university, painted a picture of the present and the future of the school. The student body, he said, has been limited to approximately 600 students in order that the faculty might exercise a selective choice and that the size of the classes might be kept within the bounds of what the faculty and facilities of the institution can accommodate and keep the standard of the work high.

Student Body Selected

In these days when it has become popular to go to college and when more than the number of students than can be adequately cared for are storming the doors of institutions of higher learning, the institution is fortunate which is able to select those whose scholastic record and character indicate that they can make the best use of the instruction that is accorded them. Dr. Doney pointed out. The aim of Willamette university has been, not to compete with state institutions, but to supply something in the way of higher educational opportunities peculiar to itself.

Of the class of 115 freshmen admitted to the university last year only three were ranked in the lower half of their graduating classes as to scholarship, he said. Dr. Doney declared that the university would face a money crisis next year when the first large payment toward the endowment fund falls due, in accordance with the agreement with the general educational board of the Rockefeller foundation, which pledged itself to contribute $250,000 of the $1,250,000 raised for building purposes and endowment by the university in a recent campaign as other contributions become available. He urged the necessity of alumni and friends of the institution paying up endowment subscriptions and renewing them where they have expired.

Dr. Doney Tells Needs
The university law library is in need of an addition of 7500 volumes to bring it up to the requirements of standard law schools. The university likewise is in need of a new library building, science hall and music hall, Dr. Doney said.

Among the speakers were Harold Eakin of Salem, president of the University Alumni association; Clarence Gillette, president of the Portland Willamette club, younger group; Professor James T. Mathews, dean of the faculty at the university; Dr. George H. Alden, also of the university faculty; Roy S. Keene, coach of athletics; Dr. Neal Zimmerman, and Joseph Stearns, Portland attorney, who served as toastmaster. In addition to these a number of the older group of alumni spoke.

CRITICIZE COUNCIL DECISION ON CAMP

Profits Should Be Used for Improvement or Camp Discontinued, Argued

It was mighty poor business for the city councilmen to take away profits of the municipal auto park and spend the money for other purposes, instead of permitting the park board to use the money made by the park for improvement purposes, according to a letter received by U. S. Page, president of the chamber of commerce.

The letter in part is as follows: "The tourist coming into Salem is first impressed with the wonderful country around, long before he arrives in the Capital city. But no one who has not experienced it can realize the terrific staggering blow that awaits this impression at the municipal camp grounds.

"As to the idea of making a profit from the municipal camp for the city from a dollar and cent standpoint, I think is absolutely absurd. If it were possible to figure the loss that Salem has sustained in the last few years on account of its out of date and almost antiquated camp grounds, it would have been changed long ago.

"I am satisfied that if the majority of the property owners in Salem realized the real conditions of the municipal camp grounds, they would not rest until we had the best and most up to date municipal tourist camp on the Pacific coast. Now we have almost the worst.

"No municipal camp would be better than the one we have. But I can see no reason why Salem should not have a real up to date municipal auto camp.

"The right kind of a camp is one of the most effective ways of advertising the city. The progressiveness of the city is reflected in its auto camp.

"Take for instance the rest rooms and comfort stations. Most any city is better equipped in this way than the Salem municipal auto camp.

"If the city council will not give the park board the money it craves for improvement, I sincerely hope it will discontinue operation of the camp as a municipal tourist camp."

BOY SCOUTS HAVE HIKE

Many Merit Badges Won During Outing at Painter's Woods

Numerous merit badges will be awarded to Salem Boy Scouts at the next court of honor session, all as a result of the hike taken to Painter's woods, north of the city, Saturday, reports Scout Executive Harold E. Ware.

Thirty-three scouts attended, every troop being represented. Most of the time was spent in passing tests for merit awards connected with outdoor lore—woodcraft, pioneering, etc. This was followed by a baseball game.

Outdoor hikes will be frequent during the spring months, Ware announces.

Herbert Redmond Files Suit Seeking Divorce

Dr. Herbert D. Redmond, who was married in May, 1926, is seeking divorce from his wife, Jennie E., on the grounds of household negligence including failure to provide meals at the proper time and interference with his practice.

Dr. Redmond claimed in the suit that his wife meddled with affairs at his office, rearranging articles of furniture and equipment in such manner as to greatly inconvenience him.

The plaintiff further states that he has provided for his wife's minor daughter like a dutiful father since their marriage 10 months ago and that the defendant is unappreciative of her position in Salem, wishing to have him move to Mill City or some other location more congenial than Salem. He asks complete and immediate separation.

A Style Innovation

The Secret of Good Appearance . . . .

ENSEMBLES

As Adopted by the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers at the National Convention March Twenty-second in St. Louis, Mo.

MEN WHO STRIVE for the best effect in dress know it is not attained merely by expensive apparel. Some frequently ponder the real answer.

There is nothing complex about looking your best. The "secret" lies in the skill with which a man harmonizes his clothing and accessories . . . shirts, ties, hose, handkerchiefs, shoes, etc. Color is the basis of this selection, but type and style are important, too.

In truth, the smart appearance that really well dressed men achieve is part of a carefully thought out plan. This, Bishop's store is unfolding in the presentation of a service which can help any man to find the color, pattern or style best suited to him.

It is the "Ensemble" idea. Women know it . . . and find it useful. Men will appreciate it as they come to know it better.

Here Is the Ensemble Idea

Some men look best in blue suits, some in grey, some in tans; plaids are becoming to some, stripes or plain fabrics to others. . . One man can wear bright colors and accessories with contrasting effects because they emphasize the best features of his appearance; another dresses in better style in more subdued clothes.

Illustrated in our windows is this new personalized style service. Displayed are "Ensembles" or dress combinations in which every article has been selected to harmonize with the others. Men may readily see the effect of the complete suit—chosen with a definite goal in mind. This is the first of a series—watch our windows for future "Ensembles." At your convenience we shall be glad to talk over this new "Ensemble" idea.
