Corn Kept in Fine
Condition in Crib

No Services Held Sunday in Methodist Church; Grades Road

PRATUM, March 28.—(Special.)—The statement that a man from Missouri "must be shown" does not hold good for this community in as much as it took a man from Missouri to show the people of the community how to keep corn through the winter without hankin' it up by the hanks in the smoke house.

William Nottzinger has at present a corn-crib almost full of fine dry corn, which was hauled direct from the field and put in the crib just like they do in the East except that the crib is only five and one half feet in width.

Mr. Nottzinger is fattening a fine lot of hogs every year besides having left a great amount of excellent seed corn. The corn is in as good condition as any eastern corn at this season of the year.

This is a wonderful boom for Marion county as it not only provides a first class feed for stock the whole year around, but also makes possible crop rotation on a much larger scale.

Peter Bischoff has returned from a six weeks visit in California.

Fred Hensch, road supervisor, is grading some of the roads in his district.

There was no meeting held in the Methodist church on Sunday morning on account of the Hayesville Sunday School convention. This convention was held at the Kelsor school. Misses Edna and Mildred Meyers, Anna Bischoff and Marion Beesley gave a report on the older girls' conference, which they attended at Corvallis. A number of reports were given by young people who attended a meeting in Portland recently.

AUBURN, March 28.—(Special.)—A memorial to Robert Bartruff of Middle Grove was adopted in the form of resolution at the Hayesville Sunday School convention, held at the Kelsor school, March 27, as follows:

Whereas, Mr. Robert Bartruff has been an active member, as well as a faithful officer in the Middle Grove church and Sunday school for the past 16 years, and, whereas, he has loyally attended and been an earnest worker in almost every district convention for many years, and in view of this faithfulness and loyalty, his absence being keenly felt at this convention, therefore:

Be it resolved, that we, the members of the Hayesville district convention, voice our sympathy to the family in its bereavement, and

Be it further resolved, that this convention devote a moment in silence to the memory of our brother and in silent prayer for God's uplifting presence and comfort to the family. Recommending that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, to his parents, to the Middle Grove Sunday school, and that a copy be spread on the minutes of the convention, and copies be published in each of the Salem daily papers. SIDELIGHTS OF THE STAGE and SCREEN

Capitol Theater

All through the length of his engagement he was either fighting or digging ditches. The story is one of bare knuckle prize ring of 50 years ago and his fights were bare knuckle affairs just as they were conducted in the old days.

His opponent was Malcolm Waite, which wasn't any too good, because what's rough work to most other people is very gentle for Malcolm. This was supposed to be a 64-round battle for the championship of America.

Of course, no such number of rounds were taken for the picture, but there were two full days in which he and Ralph were almost continually before the camera.

The fights were staged in the open under the broiling sun, in a breathless California canyon, and there was no need of an atomizer to put on fake perspiration.

After Ralph recovered from the fights he went to work digging ditches. In the story James Carabine after his defeat in the prize ring, becomes a ditch digger and the story is followed with the fidelity of a detective.

COMMITTEEMEN DISCUSS

government there was at a stalemate, but after a spirited contest, the government was vested in a mayor and a board of commissioners. Administration of the city was divided into four departments, with the mayor-president one of the commissioners, but with no city department assigned to him.

The commission plan spread rapidly throughout the country, and within the first 15 years almost 400 cities had adopted it in some form. Among the larger municipalities which saw advantages in this plan and took it over were Buffalo, Newark, New Orleans, St. Paul and Portland.

Concentrates Power
The commission government, it was pointed out, tends to concentrate all powers, administrative and legislative, in one collegiate authority. In the commonest form it differs from the council system in the fact that its members do not represent single districts, but are elected at large by the voters of the entire city.

Evils in the plan as seen by some of the committeemen were that it would bring about a diffusion of power in making appropriations and enacting ordinances. There would be a tendency, it was said, under the city manager plan all executive functions of the city are vested in the manager. Chosen by the commission, he appoints and removes heads of departments and other city officers subject to certain limitations. Usually the man selected for this position is a skilled man, familiar with municipal government.

Sumter Gets Credit
Sumter, a little village in South Carolina, is credited with being the first to inaugurate this plan, and in recent years more than 350 towns and cities have adopted it. Cleveland is perhaps the largest city which uses the plan.

Members of the committee which met last night to discuss the various forms are Chairman H. H. Olinger, chairman of the school board; H. N. Crain, managing editor of the Capital Journal, U. S. Page, president of the chamber of commerce; Cornelius Marvin, state librarian; J. M. Doyers, assistant attorney general; C. E. Albin and Louis Lachmund, former mayors; Watson Townsend and Harry Hawkins, councilmen.

our part, or more speed on that of Senator Reed?" challenged Gallagher, racing ahead with another question while the court stared at his bench. Reed glanced hastily at the jury.

Bereft of paternal care at the age of 9, testified Sapiro, he was placed in a San Francisco orphanage, where he remained six and one-half years. He seemed not to boast, as Gallagher led him through San Francisco common and high schools, Hebrew Union college at Cincinnati, Cincinnati university and Hastings Law school of the University of California. Mixed in was two years teaching of history at Cincinnati university, work in a San Francisco law office and a year as assistant superintendent of the orphanage which formerly housed him.

His first interest in cooperative marketing was aroused in 1908 by Colonel Horace Weinstein, later California's state marketing director. Sapiro was appointed counsel to Weinstein.

Weinstock's library was stocked with English, German and French authorities on cooperative marketing. Sapiro testified, and he read them all. He studied in addition every book on the subject in the University of California's library.

With that as a background, his first bit towards actively organizing the farmers came in 1916 when the California poultry breeders were drawn together in a cooperative enterprise.

In rapid fashion Gallagher and Sapiro raced through these organizations by Sapiro.

California Prune and Apricot Growers; California Pear Growers; California Berry Growers; California Bean, Tomato, Fruit and Milk groups; Portland, Ore., Dairyman; Washington Wheat Growers; Idaho Wheat Growers; Mississippi Cotton Planters; North and South Carolina and Georgia cotton planters; Kentucky tobacco men; wheat growers of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, North Dakota, Nebraska and possibly Sapiro said.

for each commissioner, head of an important department, to seek special concessions from the city treasury in accordance with his idea as to the importance of the department, thus permitting log-rolling. Too, it was pointed out, the plan might serve to concentrate too much power in the hands of a small body, and make the body susceptible of corruption.

Manager Plan Favored
A plan which is meeting with much favor among members of the committee is the city manager plan. This plan is closely associated with the commission form, but provides for a separation of the law-making and the law-enforcing functions, which places it on a different basis. Under the city manager plan the commission makes the law, while the appointed manager enforces it, while under the commission plan the enacting and enforcement powers are concentrated.

the Colorado wheat growers. Since 1924, Sapiro testified, he organized very few cooperatives. That remark came just at adjournment, leaving for tomorrow his delineation of reasons why.

Gallagher said tonight the rest of Sapiro's story would require an hour and a half, and after the defense completed cross examination of the plaintiff, Ford would be the next witness.
